A Christmas Poem

In Festo Navitatis
The Feast of the Nativity

Ad Matrem Virginem
To The Virgin Mother

Hymnus Eucharisticus
Eucharistic Hymn

By Father Gerard Manley Hopkins, S.J.

Mater Jesu mei,
Mater magni Dei,
Doce me de Eo,
De parvo dulci Deo.
Quantum amavisti
Quem tu concepisti,
Non concipiendum,
Dominum tremendum,
Sed in te contractum,
Verbum carnem factum?
Et contemnit idem
Ne cor meum quidem:
Meum cor indignum
Quod capiat tantum signum,
Indignum O quod gerat
Qui mane mecum erat,
Subit, O Maria,
In eucharistia.
Ipse vult intrare:
Nolo me negare.
Candens exemplare,
Doce me amare.
Dic, ut plus ametur,
Qualis videretur
Vulva dum lateret,

Mother of my Jesus,
Mother of the great God,
Teach me about Him,
About the small sweet God.
How much did you love
The One you conceived —
Thing inconceivable!
Formidable Lord,
Yet in you made small,
The Word made flesh?
And He does not even despise
My own heart:
My unworthy heart
Which holds so great a sacrament,
Unworthy, O, that it should carry
The one who was this morning with me;
He creeps in, O Mary,
In the Eucharist.
He Himself wishes to enter:
I cannot deny myself to Him.
Shining exemplar,
Teach me to love.

Say, that He may be loved more,
How did you imagine that He would look,
While He was yet hiding in your womb?

Necdum appareret,
Cum tuo fecit laetam
Vox Elisabetham,
Laetam matre matrem,
Laetum fratre fratrem.
Doce me gaudere,
Rosa, tuo vere,
Virga, tuo flore,
Vellus, tuo rore,
Arca, tua lege,
Thronus, tuo rege,
Acies, tuo duce,
Luna, tua luce,
Stella, tuo sole,
Parens, tua prole.
Nam tumeo et abundo
Immundo adhuc mundo;
Sum contristatus Sanctum
Spiritus et planctum
Custodi feci meo
Cum exhiberem Deo
Laesum atque caesum
In mea carne Jesum.

Poems of Gerard Manley Hopkins
Oxford University Press

This poem is the expression of the poet's Christmas meditation. He opens with a plea to Mary to share with him something of her knowledge and vision of her Child who is God. In the three sections of his meditation, he considers Mary in the first joyful mystery, when Jesus was conceived in her womb; in the second joyful mystery when she carried Him to Elizabeth's (and John the Baptist's) home; and in the third joyful mystery, when she looked upon Him in the first Christmas crib. The poet, in each case, also considers himself and how he shares with Mary in receiving and bearing and contemplating Jesus. In his Christmas Communion, the poet has received Jesus in his body as truly as Mary conceived Him in hers; he carries Jesus in his body as Mary carried Him in hers, though he grieves over the difference between her immaculate self (which received and prepared the Victim but did not, through sin, inflict injury upon Him) and his own sinful self; and, finally, the poet too with God's grace and Mary's help can contemplate his Savior in that faith which expresses itself in love.

The translation aims at being useful rather than beautiful, since the beauty of Father Hopkins' poem lies inextricably in the language in which it is written. I have attempted to echo some of the puns and word plays and to show some of the many hidden references to the Vulgate Scripture (e.g., the "oscula ab ore" from the Canticle of Canticles would be misleadingly translated "kisses of the mouth"). The lineup of symbols of the Blessed Virgin in the second section of the poem can be traced through Christian usage (the Little Office has made most of them familiar to Sodalists) to their original usage in the Old Testament.

As far as I know, this is the first English translation of the poem.

May the Blessings of Our Mother Mary and the Infant Jesus
Be With You This Holy Season and Throughout
All the Days Of the Coming Year.

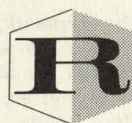

— Regis College

Not yet had He appeared
 When your voice
 Made Elizabeth happy,
 A mother made happy by a Mother,
 A brother made happy by a Brother.
 Teach me to rejoice,
 Rose, in your springtime,
 Rod, in your flower,
 Fleece, in your dew,
 Ark, in your law,
 Throne, in your King,
 Army, in your Leader,
 Moon, in your light,
 Star, in your sun,
 Parent, in your Child.
 For I too swell up, yet I am filled
 With worldliness from the world;
 I sadden the Holy Spirit
 And I make my guardian angel groan
 When I show forth to God,
 Wounded and torn
 In my flesh, Jesus.

Demum quid sensisti
 Ipsum cum vidisti
 Tandem visu pleno
 Parvulum in foeno,
 Ecce tremebundum
 Qui fixum firmat mundum
 Et involutum pannos
 Qui aeternos annos
 Nondum natus de te
 Volvebat in quiete?
 Quae tu tum dicebas
 Et quae audiebas?
 Etsi fuit mutus
 Tamen est locutus.
 Da complecti Illum,
 Mihi da pauxillum
 Tuo ex amore
 Et oscula ab ore.
 Qui pro me vult dari,
 Infans mihi fari,
 Mecum conversari,
 Tu da contemplari,
 Mater magni Dei,
 Mater Jesu mei.

L.D.S.

Finally, what did you feel
 When you saw the very One
 At last with full vision,
 The little One in the hay —
 Behold, the One all atremble
 Who made firm the fixed universe,
 And the One rolled in swaddling clothes
 Who, not yet born of you,
 Rolled the eternal years in quiet?
 What were you saying to Him then,
 And what were you hearing?
 For even though He was mute
 Yet (in the depths of your soul)
 He (the eternal Word) is speaking.
 Grant that I may embrace Him
 And give me a little out of the store of your love
 And of mystic kisses.
 The One who wishes to be given for me,
 Unspeaking, to speak to me,
 To converse with me,
 Do you give to me that I may contemplate Him too,
 Mother of the great God,
 Mother of my Jesus.
 Praise to God always!

REMEMBER WHEN...

Still a familiar scene on the Regis College campus today is the dormitory barber, practicing his "trade" by luring in unsuspecting fellow students to his "clip joint" to earn a few extra bucks. The picture was taken for the 1951 Ranger. Familiar scene?

Father Downey, Busy Seismologist

Denver's history-making earth tremors, recorded early this month, prompted more than normal attention to the Regis College seismograph station and its director Father Joseph V. Downey, S.J.

And, the incidents brought to the fore the pioneering role the Jesuits have played in the seismological field. It was in 1909, Father Downey explains, that 16 Jesuit schools in the United States, including Regis College, installed seismographs on their campuses. The Regis station, under the direction of Father William A. Forstall, S.J., was the first placed into operation in this joint scientific enterprise.

Presence of such a station at Regis, representing new area advances in the field, brought both the College and Father Forstall wide notoriety. This popularity has continued through the years.

So dependable was the Regis station that the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey hesitated setting up their own station in the Denver area. It was just a year ago this month that a government station was placed in Bergen Park. It is manned by the Colorado School of Mines.

The overall Jesuit effort was in part responsible, Father Downey noted, in pointing out the need for a world-wide system of seismological stations. Today, under government planning and operation, a 120-station system spans the world. Father Downey said that 10 of these stations are Jesuit-directed.

New instruments were installed at the Regis station in 1946, a year after Father Downey took over maintenance of the station. An Associate Professor of Physics, Father Downey terms the seismograph his "research project." "Seismology is not my field", he explains, "but there are ways the two can be tied together." He is a member of national physics and seismological associations.

Father Downey, a native of Denver, graduated from Regis High School in 1926 and entered the Society of Jesus that same year. He received his A.B. Degree from Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio in 1931, and his M.A. and M.S. Degrees from St. Louis University. He was ordained a priest in 1939.

Before joining the Regis College faculty in 1942, Father Downey taught at Regis High School from 1934-36 and at St. Louis University High from 1941-42.

The recent Denver tremors have triggered off many false alarms. "Since the two quakes I have received at least one or two calls each day asking me to check the seismograph readings," Father Downey said.

The situation has also increased the demands on his priestly counseling. Calls of concern, worry, and even "this is the end of the world" have come to Father Downey.

The first of the two quakes which rocked the Denver metropolitan area was at 10:40 a.m. Dec. 4. The second, and more severe, was recorded less than 24 hours later, at 6:48 a.m., Dec. 5.

During the two-day period Father Downey was besieged by calls from the press, radio, television and general public. He appeared on several TV newscasts, made numerous radio tape interviews, and received wide press coverage.

On the Richter scale, the more widely used of two quake measuring systems, the first had a rating of 3.5 to 4 and the second, 4 to 4.5.

A rock fault, extending from north of Brighton, Colo., into the city of Denver, is believed to be the cause of the series of tremors which first began last summer, Father Downey said.

HOME WINS OPEN CAGE SEASON

Coach Joe Hall maps out plans with newcomers to the 1962-63 Regis Varsity basketball squad, front from left, Roger Harris, Jon Rapp and Mike Giordano; back, from left, Joe Miller, Dennis Crane and Cozell Walker.

Regis College basketballers added the proper fuel to the fire of optimism that has been burning brightly in the Ranger camp as they ushered in their 1962-63 season with home wins.

Coach Joe B. Hall's talented crew whipped St. Mary of the Plains College, of Dodge City, Kans., by scores of 84-57 and 82-52 in the Fieldhouse Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

Pacing the Regis attack were senior forwards Louis Stout and Ben Wesley, and freshman center Cozell Walker, a newcomer to Regis but not to the cage sport.

Walker a 6-6 product from Clinton, Ky., was discharged from the U.S. Marines last summer where he earned a top reputation in service ball and AAU play. His value to Regis plans for the current campaign are obvious. He dunked in 42 points in the openers and tucked away 36 rebounds.

Stout, 6-3 senior from Cynthiana, Ky., had 36 points in the two-game series. Wesley, 6-3 senior from Denver, and last year's leading varsity scorer and rebounder, hit 32.

Teaming with this threesome to make up Coach Hall's starting outfit were Dean Sullivan, 6-2 senior from Hamel, Minn., and 5-10 junior Bill Whalen, of Denver.

Sophomore guard Dennis Crane, 6-3, of Cincinnati, Ohio, also saw steady action in the St. Mary sweep. In fact, Coach Hall cleared the benches in both contests.

Also adding strength to Ranger hopes for a winning year are lettermen James Ray Jones, 6-6 senior center, of Shepherdsville, Ky., and Allen Thomas, 6-5 junior forward from Lexington, Ky. Back from last year's varsity is Tom Kojis, 5-10, a junior from West Allis, Wisc., a guard. Presence of junior center Joe Miller, a 6-7 performer from Central City, Colo., also brightens the picture.

Up from last year's frosh squad are sophomores Mike Giordano, 6-4 forward from Pagosa Springs, Colo.; Roger Harris, a guard, 6-2, from Wichita, Kans.; and Jon Rapp, 6-4, a forward, from Denver.

As The Roundup went to press the Rangers had three more home foes to face before turning to their first road venture.

Coach Presley Askew's frosh squad, heavily-laden with former top prep stars from around the country, was scheduled to open its 1962-63 card Dec. 10.

Reflection Reality and Renewal at Founders Week

The reality of the status of education, more specifically Catholic and Regis education, is a situation which of necessity must be constantly contended with. This reality was discussed in varying degrees during events marking Regis College's Founders Week, held in early October.

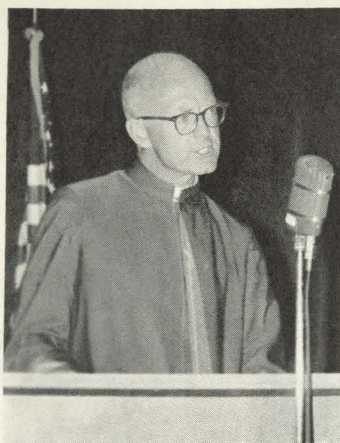

Ironically, speakers throughout the week struck similar moods, offering students, faculty and alumni of the College opportunity for reflection on the past and renewal of purpose for the future.

Students were urged to rededicate themselves to a more careful adherence to the plan of life given by Christ. The faculty and students heard our contemporary educational structure shaken by verbal shots. Alumni took time to review specific aims of the College.

New academic concepts and administrative procedures for the College were put forth. Messages were clear; critical but constructive; challenging but optimistic.

There was time too for relaxation. Alumni renewed old acquaintances and honored several distinguished members of their group.

For a complete report on Founders Week, see the following five pages.

Solemn Mass of the

"The human being who is engulfed by the swirling world of changing material things, is at the same time, surrounded by changing and contradictory philosophies. The need of bedrock belief is obvious. In the midst of a changing world you students are seeking the wisdom that science, philosophy, and the arts have to offer. You seek a fuller understanding of your religion under conditions most apt to help you lead a good life. You need not fear the sweeping changes that modern science and art may have to offer. You need not be ashamed that your moral life is based on the unchanged morality of Christ-given direction. Your renewal is to be a more careful adherence to the plan of life given you by Christ."

Maginnis, S.J., Assistant

1962 Fall Convocation

The jarring effects of Sputnik I on the complacency of American education in general and Catholic education in particular, and the recovery made over the past five years in these areas were emphasized by Father Maginnis.

"After Sputnik I the nation began a searching self-analysis of its educational system, and almost coincidentally an historian of the Catholic Church in America, Msgr. John Tracy Ellis, spirited a self-analysis of Catholic education.

"As we mark the fifth anniversary of Sputnik I, we have regained our complacency and it is not too badly damaged. Out of both situations arose a new movement in Catholic education, a real concern for liberal education. This movement has now reached the point that Catholics demand the genuine article.

"The men of vision have been working in the best interests of the Church and of our nation, designedly so, and with the best possible motives. The essential reality of our situation has not yet changed, there is a new reality to contend with, a reality which we shall ignore at the peril of our future, and a reality which has begun already to show some tangible results in our midst.

"Almost every intellectual, cultural, artistic and social problem in contemporary America cries aloud for an historically and technologically Catholic solution.

"Many indictments have been hurled against Catholic education. We have been told that we have forsaken the heritage which presumably we never knew, and have fallen down in worship before the contemporary educational idols of 'life adjustment', 'democratic living', 'vocational training', and 'social acceptability.'

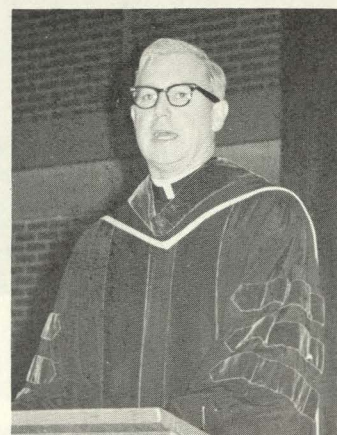

"An even more specific version of the indictment reads: in the classroom, too much spoon-feeding and not enough independent study; too much lecturing and not enough discussion; too much of the ready answer and not enough of the inquiring mind.

"We have been charged with an

Speaking at 1962 Fall Convocation

"We must give serious consideration to the commitment which we have to intellectual life and the pursuit of truth and knowledge. Apt subjects for study are those which will prepare a man to do those things of interest to him, which not only enable him to do something, but to be something. I ask that you students consider your purpose for being at Regis College, your obligation to society and your obligation to the Church."

The Reverend Harry E.
Hoewischer, S.J., Dean, Regis
College, Speaking at
1962 Fall Convocation

"At Regis College we have a great inheritance, given us through the endeavors of those who have been here before us, which allows you and me to enjoy the challenge of an educational institution. As we reflect on the 85 years of the College's existence, we too, must capture as a body a sense of dedication to truth, hard work and responsibility. May the coming year be blessed by Almighty God and the dedicated work to which we are committed."

insufficiency of Catholic Oppenheimers, Salks and Einsteins. Poignantly enough, once the charge has been made and challenged, the bill of cultural and social particulars adduced in its defense does not make very consoling reading.

"In our society Catholic values are bound to be challenged in most intellectual circles. If the Catholic college graduate is not prepared for this, he is quite simply not prepared for life."

In offering his own hopes for the future of Regis, Father Maginnis set forth specifics, among them:

A strengthening and expansion of the core of human liberal arts disciplines; less emphasis on the so-called major and minors; incorporation of a complete curriculum in the fine arts into all of the liberal arts programs; continued re-assessment of the areas of curriculum and extra-curricular activity; and a determination to continue along the way that we have so well begun, of eliminating that death-dealing cliché of American education, the survey course.

The Reverend Thomas L. O'Brien, S.J.
Director of Honors Program
Seattle University
Main Speaker,
1962 Faculty Convocation

"Those of us involved in Catholic education, by vocation and dedication, are caught in an immense period of transition. We have been forced out of the posture of staticism into an attitude of movement. We must make an honest intelligent examination of our own history if we are to clarify our position in the attitude of movement in which we find ourselves. Our protectionist attitude has its advantages but it has betrayed us into an increasingly indefensible position. We must make a sincere, honest, creative criticism if we are to meet this change and to produce the kind of students we so desperately need today. We must re-evaluate our own competency, which in our nation today is dominated more by spirit than body. We have a scientific, physical, material education today and our single greatest threat to American freedom is not from Communism, but from the University campuses of the United States."

Regis Directors Honored

Regis College paid tribute to members of the Regis Directors organization during the annual Directors Dinner November 20 in the Student Center. Around 350 persons attended the event as guests of the Very Rev. Richard F. Ryan, S.J., President, and the College Board of Trustees.

During the program a citation saluting the Directors for their talents, energies and financial support for the development of the College was read by the Reverend Thomas J. Sheehy, S.J., Secretary of the Trustees.

Guest speaker was William Nation, Mayor of Cheyenne, Wyo. Speaking on the topic, "Let Freedom Ring", Mayor Nation called for re-dedication to the defense of freedom "so that we may never lose sight of the priceless heritage bequeathed us by those who have gone before us."

Father Ryan reported on various aspects of the College. "The days ahead are challenging and exhilarating," he said. He noted the revision of the Regis curriculum which is now being studied, adding that more emphasis is needed on the liberal arts. "We must come to grips with the scientific method," he emphasized.

Father Ryan also touched on the physical needs of the College. An addition to the Student Center, and construction of a new residence hall are planned and other immediate needs include a library and science building.
