Regis College's national award winning community relations program, Regis Week, will be held May 3-9, 1965, the Very Rev. Richard F. Ryan, S.J., President of Regis, has announced.

Serving as General Chairman for the eighth annual event will be Harold F. Silver, prominent Denver civic and business leader and a 1961 recipient of the College's Civis Princeps award.

Mr. Silver will head a steering committee of over 50 persons who will assist the College in planning the Regis Week events.

Honorary Chairmen appointments for Regis Week have been accepted by the Most Rev. Urban J. Vehr, Archbishop of Denver; Colorado's United States Senators Gordon Allott and Peter H. Dominick; Governor John A. Love; Mayor Thomas G. Currihan; and Frank J. Johns, General Chairman of 1964 Regis Week activities.

Included on the 1965 program will be the annual Civic Conference Wednesday, May 5, at the Brown Palace Hotel. This year's Conference will deal with Denver's Community Goals and will be co-sponsored by the Denver Planning Board. Richard H. Olson, Vice President and General Manager of the Denver division of Sundstrand Corp., will serve as Conference Chairman.

Presentation of the annual Civis Princeps medals and a Distinguished Service Citation will highlight the annual Regis Week Civis Princeps Banquet Saturday, May 8, at the Brown Palace Hotel.

Regis College students, in addition to their annual Ranger Day activities May 9 as part of Regis Week, will also sponsor an on-campus appearance of Glenn Yarbrough, nationally popular folk singer, on Saturday evening, May 8, in the Regis Fieldhouse.

For the second consecutive year Denver radio station KLZ will stage a live broadcast for the Civis Princeps awards ceremonies May 8. The broadcast will go on the air at 8:30 p.m. and continue through the conclusion of the Banquet program.

DIALOGUE

The hour was late. The formal sessions and speeches of the day were over. But yet the dialogue continued.

Small groups of people huddled here and there in the large room. In one, a short, bespectacled man drew thoughtfully on his pipe as he listened to the remarks of a woman in a bright-colored knit dress.

A middle-aged couple gave pensive response to the conversation between the young seminarian and a Rabbi, who formed a group in another area.

Few seemed ready to leave . . . and the dialogue continued . . . testimony to the rapport that had been established during the day, the day of a Catholic-Jewish Dialogue on the Regis College campus.

The nearly 350 Dialogue participants not only came early and stayed late, they gave example of the prominent role which the layman is being given in the renewed ecumenism of our time. There was great articulation of ideas.

The day's program was the second such conference sponsored by Regis College and the Mountain States Regional Office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

A similar conference in May, 1964, an event of the College's Regis Week program, sparked this "Second Session: Attitudes and Images, a Catholic-Jewish Dialogue" eight months later.

A layman-dominated steering committee chaired by the Rev. Francis J. Malecek, S.J., Associate Professor of Philosophy at Regis, had set the stage for the successful second session with a series of pre-conference meetings and lectures which included visits to churches and synagogues.

The first Dialogue was also a success, but with keen evaluation the steering committee members felt the scope of another conference should be increased; greater participation encouraged from representatives of both faiths. It was done.

Myths, customs, suspicions and hostilities which support prejudice and mar Christian-Judaic relations received more than a surface exploration during the second Dialogue Jan. 13.

Foyers and lounges of The Regis Center building were pressed into service as meeting rooms for the 10 discussion groups. The informality was conducive to dialogue with frankness and candor. Discussions during the day covered such areas as Social Justice and Economic Concerns; Church-State Relations; Home and Family Life; Cultural Motivations and Patterns; Joint Community Action.

Coffee breaks, a hospitality hour and a buffet dinner encouraged an even more relaxing atmosphere.

"Delightful," "a step forward," "rapport was established, but depth was lacking," were some of the responses given on evaluation reports.

However limited by time, it had been a day of good friendship and good conversation. But there were those who succinctly concluded, "we have a lot to learn," and rightfully queried, "we have articulated, but where are we?"

The Dialogue's keynote speaker was Oscar Cohen, National Program Director of the ADL, New York. The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Mark T. Hurley, Chancellor of the Diocese of Stockton, Calif., and an observer at all sessions of the Vatican Council, addressed the dinner session.

Mr. Cohen noted that "never in the centuries of Catholic-Jewish relations was the time so propitious to radically change the distorted images in our minds."

"The Jewish and Catholic communities of America are today on the threshold of friendly relationships probably unprecedented in history," he said.

"This results only in part from the Declaration on the Jews provisionally approved by the Ecumenical Council. Of the greatest significance to future relationships between the two religious groups was the leadership assumed by the American Catholic Bishops in Rome in pressing for a declaration to counter hostility to the Jews.

"Equally important, their passionate advocacy of justice for all men and their espousal of religious liberty, indicate common cause welcomed by Jews. And the spirit of social justice embodied in the Encyclical Pacem in Terris evokes warm response in the hearts of Jews. These are manifestations of a growing community of interest and the development of a new era in Catholic-Jewish relationships," Mr. Cohen said.

In examining the myths that tend to create Jewish prejudice against Catholics, Mr. Cohen pointed out

“the first image which bothers Jews is the myth of the monolithic character of the Catholic community. It is true that Catholics laugh when they are told of this absurd accusation, but it is no joke. There is widespread belief among Protestants and Jews that the Pope in Rome orders Catholics what to do, how to do it, and how to vote. It is as if he had a control panel with buttons which, when pushed, automatically activated Catholics throughout the world.”

Other myths which perturb Jews, Mr. Cohen continued, would include:

Apprehension that Catholics “would erode or destroy the wall of separation between church and state.”

A belief that Catholics are “clannish, standoffish and parochial, an accusation which, by the way, is made by Catholics against Jews.”

“There is wide-spread belief that the Catholic Church, holding its constituents in some kind of strange captivity, is opposed to freedom. The myth is that the Catholic Church is seeking to achieve majority status and impose its will in such matters as birth control, divorce, censorship and religious belief.” Mr. Cohen added that “these prejudices are beginning to be shaken.”

“The election of President Kennedy and his actions as President did much to allay the fears and dispell the doubts about Catholics in high office. Jews had these doubts even though they voted for the late President in overwhelming numbers.”

Mr. Cohen emphasized that “there is now the need to do with these images what cannot be done by dialogue alone.” He recommended establishment of appropriate programs into our community institutions, our schools, seminaries, houses of worship, and organizations. Not all can be “sweetness and light.” “But, we have much in common and it is better to concentrate on seeing eye to eye than on slugging toe to toe. Research indicates,” Mr. Cohen concluded, “that prejudice is reduced most quickly when people work together for a common good.”

Msgr. Hurley, achieving as one observer put it “a tremendous moment and drama of communication between faiths,” spoke on “The Odyssey of a Document,” a detailed presentation on the Counciliar declaration on “The Relations of the Church to Non-Christians, Particularly Towards the Jews” and the changes it underwent in the interim before its presentation just before the close of the last Vatican Council session.

“This declaration, condemning anti-Semitism and charges of deicide,” Msgr. Hurley said, “was unequivocally ‘entirely religious in its contents and spiritual in its purpose.’”

Need for the statement on the Jews, Msgr. Hurley explained, came from many sources—the atrocities of World War II, the Hochhuth play, The Deputy. “The need was for a religious document, not a political ‘document’ and the Vatican Council had to consider it in these terms. There was a need for a statement from the official voice of the Catholic church."

"Pope Paul in a most decisive manner sent the question to the floor of the council as a religious document, eschewing other influences. It was indeed a long way from the yellow Star of David, the badge of Jewish outcast, of the Fourth Lateran Council of 1215, to Vatican II of 1963 with its condemnation of both past and present persecutions of the Jewish people. And it has been done not out of political expediency, nor corporate or personal preferment, nor simply in a vague feeling of brotherhood but in justice and in truth," Msgr. Hurley pointed out.

He noted that the Conciliar draft "was not a placebo pill nor a tranquillizer for Christian consciences or Jewish fears."

The latest declaration, he said, straightaway attacks and condemns the prevalent myths about the Jewish people. "Not only is hatred for Jews, prejudice, intolerance and persecution and anti-Semitism condemned outright, a condemnation which is neither new nor particularly significant in view of Papal condemnations of this century, but what is more to the point, the religious myths which have been employed as justification on religious grounds for such persecution come under Conciliar condemnation in no uncertain or diplomatic terms."

Msgr. Hurley underscored the fact that hatred for injustice to and persecution of the Jews are not only deplored but condemned whether in the past or in the present day. The Jewish people should never be accused as rejected or cursed by God or guilty of deicide, he said.

Msgr. Hurley described myths held about the Jews as "convenient tools of persecution." The myth of the Jews' guilt of deicide presupposes that all at the crucifixion of Christ knew that Jesus was God, but how could so many be blamed when they were neither present, consulted, or even conscious of what was happening on Good Friday?

No other proposal before the Ecumenical Council so far has met with less opposition within the aula of St. Peter's and yet none has provoked as much or nearly as much "outside" pressure, Msgr. Hurley said. He noted that at least five governments, presumably Arab, have protested the declaration, opposed on grounds of political repercussions in the Near East.

Session IV will see the final vote on the revised declaration and Msgr. Hurley said "the omens are favorable."

"There is mystery in all of this," Msgr. Hurley concluded, "the mystery of the ways of God with mankind. The American experience opened many doors and has given confidence to others that men of all faiths and none can nonetheless live in peace as brothers. Both the European and Middle East experience and history present a sad and tragic picture.

"The Catholic Church is quite conscious of its roots in the Old Testament and sees God's merciful designs in history. Suffering has redemptive value and suffering by the bearers of Divine Revelation, albeit through the Old Testament alone, has a redemptive value before the throne of God. The rest is hidden in the mystery of God's dealing with mankind," he said.

The steering committee was composed of 23 lay representatives of Catholic, Jewish and community organizations from the Denver metropolitan area.

Assisting the committee were Mr. Steinhauser; Jeremiah Simmons, ADL staff consultant; and George J. Reinert, Director of Public Relations at Regis College.

Members of both the Jesuit and lay faculty at Regis College made valuable contributions to the Dialogue program. John V. Coyne, Assistant Academic Dean, offered greetings of the College at the opening session. The College welcome at the dinner program was given by Dr. Magnus V. Braunagel, Assistant Professor of Physics and President of the College Lay Faculty Assn.

Other faculty members served as discussion leaders, recorders and resource experts during the group sessions.

An important part of the day's program were summary reports, one presented during the dinner program, the other at the conclusion of the evening sessions.

Sheldon Steinhauser, Mountain States Regional Director of the ADL, pointed out specific questions discussed during the afternoon sessions. He also noted "the opportunity to break through is at hand, the urgency of the problem is upon us and the need of the hour is not to dream dreams of the possible yesterday, or unrealistic todays, but of the possible tomorrows and the question of responsibility." He suggested that the responsibility "will have to come from all of us."

Rabbi Joseph Goldman, in summarizing the day's program, noted that the capacity to raise the question (where are we?), the capacity in trying toward an answer, suggests the hope of man at any given time. "It is correct for us to say to ourselves where are we in our dialogue, where are we in our lives and to the extent that we are able to answer that question, we can join hands in leading the way. . . ."

He added that ". . . it is realistic to assume that with a recognition of places wherein we differ, with a recognition of our fears as well as our common aspirations, we can learn to understand each other."

Sponsors for the Dialogue were:

The Most Rev. Urban J. Vehr, Archbishop of Denver; the Very Rev. Richard F. Ryan, S.J., President of Regis; Dr. Joseph L. Lichten, Director, Department of Intercultural Affairs, ADL; Rabbi Manuel Laderman, President, Rabbinical Council of Denver; Dr. Chester M. Alter, Chancellor, University of Denver.

M. J. Baum, Jr., President, Allied Jewish Community Council of Denver; the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John B. Cavanagh, Editor, Denver Catholic Register; the Very Rev. John J. Danagher, Rector, St. Thomas Seminary, Denver; Dr. Eugene E. Dawson, President, Colorado Woman's College; Louis Degeñ, National Commissioner, ADL; Robert Gamzey, Editor, Intermountain Jewish News.

Edward Hirschfeld, Chairman, Denver Executive Committee, ADL; the Very Rev. Msgr. William H. Jones, Denver Archdiocesan Superintendent of Schools; Edward Miller, National Commissioner, ADL; Hon. Charles Rosenbaum, Member, National Executive Committee, ADL; Melvin H. Schlesinger, Honorary Vice Chairman, National Committee, ADL; John J. Sullivan, President, Bosworth, Sullivan & Co.

Aviation Expert 1965 Regis Directors Dinner Speaker —

Modern Communications, Air Travel Aiding World Peace

The development of communications and air transportation has created a revolution dramatically effecting man's search for world peace, an aviation expert told the 1965 Regis Directors Dinner audience at Regis College Jan. 7.

Joseph T. Geuting, Jr., of Washington, D. C., main speaker at the Dinner, said the speed of rapid transportation has loosed a dynamic force on the world which is rubbing divergent views together but yet breaking down barriers which have made world peace so elusive.

A former Denver resident and Regis High School student, Mr. Geuting is Manager of the Utility Airplane Council of Aerospace Industries Assn. He has been associated with the aviation industry for 25 years.

Mr. Geuting is a member of the President's Council of Georgetown University and Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart in Purchase, N. Y. He is one of the founder-members of the people-to-people Health Foundation (Project HOPE). Both Mr. and Mrs. Geuting have received Papal honors.

Over 400 persons attended the Directors Dinner in The Regis Center as guests of the Very Rev. Richard F. Ryan, S.J., President, and members of the Regis Board of Trustees.

Alfred M. (Bud) Ellerby, President of the Elcar Fence Co., Denver, and Chairman of The Regis Directors, served as toastmaster for the Dinner.

In his talk Mr. Geuting noted that with modern techniques of communication and air travel, "Distance ceases to be a barrier . . . and understanding starts to be a bridge."

He cited strong movements of nationalism throughout the world as a result of the speed of communications and transportation.

"The geographic gap which once separated the peoples of the world no longer exists, but the same is not true of the social and economic gaps which separate and divide the world," Mr. Geuting continued.

"Man is now face-to-face with his once remote neighbor, and concurrently face-to-face with the real hurdles to peace, brotherhood, and world-wide prosperity, ignorance, different languages, strange customs, racial barriers, vastly different standards of living." He conceded that under such conditions the effects are bound to be explosive.

But once past the hurdles of misunderstanding and mistrust, he said, we can become secure in the knowledge that this once distant and strange alien is in reality our actual friend with whom we can work, prosper and live in world peace.

During the Dinner program Father Ryan gave a brief progress report on the College commenting on academic and administrative development and also plans for future building construction at the College.

A citation honoring The Regis Directors for their support of the College, their help in winning more citizens to the cause of Regis and for their inspiring example of leadership, was read by the Rev. Thomas J. Sheehy, S.J., Secretary of the Trustees.

The Rev. Bernard J. Murray, S.J., Spiritual Advisor at the College and a longtime friend of the Geutings, offered the Invocation and Benediction.

Heart Attack Fatal to Regis Leader

Regis College lost a faithful and longtime friend with the sudden death Feb. 6 of Emmett J. Dignan, prominent Denver civic and business leader and a member of the Regis President's Council since its inception in the fall of 1957.

Mr. Dignan died at St. Joseph's Hospital in Denver a few hours after being stricken with a heart attack at his home.

In addition to his work with the President's Council, Mr. Dignan served Regis in many other activities. In recognition of his many contributions to the College and the Denver community, Regis conferred an Honorary Doctor of Laws Degree upon Mr. Dignan during the 1953 commencement exercises.

The Very Rev. Richard F. Ryan, S.J., President of Regis, said "Regis College and its President have lost one of their greatest strengths in the death of their good friend, benefactor, counselor and representatives.

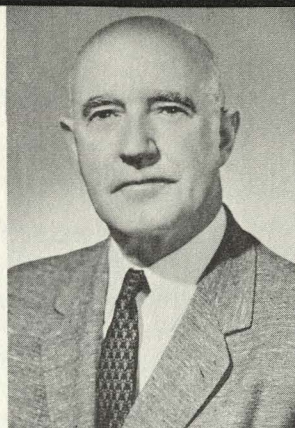

"While Emmett J. Dignan was associated with Regis College since first coming to Denver, he signalized himself in 1949 by co-chairing and bringing to successful conclusion the financial drive of Regis College which provided Loyola Hall," Father Ryan said.

"In the twelve and one-half years that I knew Emmett, since I came to Regis College, we never called upon him, asked him for a favor, requested his cooperation that he didn't respond quickly and generously. May Almighty God grant him a rich reward of eternal peace."

At the request of the family, an Emmett J. Dignan Memorial Fund has been established at Regis College.

Mr. Dignan was born in Seneca, Kans., and attended St. Benedict's College at Atchinson, Kans. After his graduation he was engaged in agriculture and banking and became Executive Vice-President of the regional Agricultural Credit Corp., a government livestock loan association. He was working with this group when the family moved to Denver in 1937.

Mr. Dignan joined the Denver

U.S. National Bank in 1940 and directed the then-new livestock loan department at the bank. He became recognized as one of the nation's leading authorities on livestock financing. Mr. Dignan retired as a Vice President of the Denver U.S. in 1940 but remained on the bank's Advisory Board.

Mr. Dignan entered private business and was President of Colorado Investment Associates, Inc., and served as a Director of Four Corners Oil and Minerals Co.

Active in an endless number of church and civic affairs, Mr. Dignan was named a Papal Knight of St. Gregory in 1960 by Pope John XXIII. He served several years as Chairman of the Colorado Racing Commission.

Survivors include his wife, Mary; two daughters, Mrs. Kathleen Reed and Mrs. Paul Mott, of Denver; two sons, Jerry and David, also of Denver.

Plan Special Courses For Summer Session

Regis College's 1965 summer session will open June 15 and continue through Aug. 5, College officials have announced.

The summer session bulletin, now available through the Dean's office at the College, lists regular course offerings in 17 areas. In addition five special programs are planned for the seven-week session.

The special courses include a teacher training program on the Girard Latin course; liturgy: theory and practice; physical geology; modern languages, one full year of modern language in seven weeks; and an English institute for secondary teachers.

The Regis summer session is co-educational. Carroll Hall will be available to male students and O'Connell Hall is reserved for women, with special privileges arranged for Sisters.

Regis Leases Land For College Park Project

Ground was broken in mid-March for the construction of a $1.5 million shopping center on 11.9 acres of land leased from Regis College at West 50th and Federal Blvd.

Under construction is a K-Mart Department Store, which will be owned by the Northwest Land and Development Co., of Houston, Tex. and sub-leased to the S. S. Kresge Co., of Detroit, Mich.

The K-Mart building will cover two and one-half acres or 105,000 square feet of the nearly 12 acres leased from Regis. Parking will be provided for 1,000 cars.

The development is the beginning of long-range plans for a $6-$7 million "College Park" apartment and business complex on approximately 28 acres of unused land adjoining the present Regis campus to the east.

Martin C. Kelly, Vice-President of Western Federal Savings in Denver and former Assistant to the President at Regis, is representing the College in "College Park" development plans. While at Regis Mr. Kelly conducted an exhaustive study of land uses.

Upon termination of the lease ownership of the land and all buildings and improvements will revert to Regis College. The College will have the option of continuing commercial operation or clearing the land and converting it to College uses.

Two Join Regis Faculty

Two persons joined the fulltime faculty at Regis College at the start of the second semester in January.

John E. Donohue, '54, was named an Instructor in Education. He holds a Master's degree in education from George Peabody Teacher's College at Nashville, Tenn., and has been teaching in the Denver Public Schools. He served in the U. S. Air Force from 1942-63 as a pilot commander, attaining the rank of Major.

Russell D. Bean, of Denver, a member of the Regis evening session faculty for several years, was named an Instructor in Accounting. He holds the M.B.A. degree from the University of Denver and the Bachelor's degree from Colorado College.

Play Set April 2, 3, 4

The Regis College drama department will present "The Andersonville Trial" April 2, 3, 4, in-the-round in the College Fieldhouse, at 8 p.m. each night. The play is being directed by James Edson, of KLZ, Denver.

Library Awarded Grant

The Regis College library has received a Mark VII Microcard Reader under a $1,000 grant-in-kind awarded by the Association of College and Research Libraries Grants Committee, a division of the American Library Assn. The grant was one of 162 selected from among 547 applicants.

Swimmers Close Season

The Regis College swimming team went winless during a six-meet winter schedule, but Coach Alan Hodges' young competitors show promise for the 1965-66 season.

The swimmers dropped two meets to Colorado College, single events to Colorado School of Mines and Colorado State College. They also competed in invitational meets at Colorado College and Western State College.

National Groups Plan Meets on Regis Campus

With continued addition of physical facilities to the campus Regis College has not only been able to sponsor more on-campus public events, but has been able to accommodate many of the increasing number of requests to host meetings of various local, state and national organizations.

From July 18-30 the College will host around 100 persons attending a Workshop for Jesuit Student Personnel Programs and Services.

The Jesuit Philosophical Convention will be held at Regis April 19 in conjunction with the American Catholic Philosophical Convention being held in Denver April 20-21.

Around 1,000 Colorado high school students were expected on campus March 27 for the annual meeting of the Colorado State Junior Classical League. And on March 13 the annual Denver Archdiocesan Science Fair was held in the Regis College Fieldhouse.

Shell Grant to Regis

For the third consecutive year the Shell Companies Foundation, Inc., has awarded Regis College a $1,500 grant under its Shell Assists program. The grant, consisting of three $500 Assists, is designed for unrestricted use by the College, for general faculty development and for development of the natural science and mathematics departments.

Students Elect Leaders

With the exception of one office, the "New Breed" party scored a sweeping victory in recent elections on the Regis College campus to name new members to the Student Senate Executive Board.

Elected were: President, John Martin, Kansas City, Mo.; Vice-President, Ed Connolly, Sioux City, Ia.; Secretary, John Thomas, Wichita, Kans.; Treasurer, Joe Figlino, Denver; Directors, Mike Veysey, Old Greenwich, Conn., Rich Scherer, Denver, and Brian Kimmel, Denver.

Thomas was the lone victor from the "Commitment Unlimited" party slate of candidates.

Regis College Spring Sports —

Baseball, Tennis, Golf Teams Face Busy Schedules

Baseball, golf and tennis moved into the sports spotlight at Regis College with the advent of spring and Ranger Athletic Director Mick Pahl has announced busy schedules for each of the three varsity clubs.

For the first time in many years Regis will be able to host home baseball and tennis dates on the new field and courts completed last year north and east of the Fieldhouse.

Coach Chuck Swanson's baseballers inaugurated the spring sports season and a 25-game schedule against Colorado School of Mines at Golden March 24.

Both the baseball and tennis teams will be making a mid-April swing through New Mexico, Texas and Arizona.

The complete Ranger baseball schedule:

March 24 — Colorado School of Mines; March 27 — University of Wyoming*‡; March 28 — Colorado School of Mines*‡;

April 2—Colorado State University; April 3—University of Denver; April 7 — Colorado School of Mines; April 10 — Eastern New Mexico University ‡; April 12 — Texas Western College ‡; April 13 — St. Joseph's College ‡; April 23 — Southern Colorado State College*; April 24 — Colorado State University*; April 27 — University of Denver*; April 30 — Colorado School of Mines; May 1 — St. Joseph's College*‡; May 2 — Colorado College; May 4 — University of Denver*; May 8 — University of Wyoming ‡; May 11 — University of Denver*; May 13 — Colorado College*.

*—Home Game; ‡—Doubleheader.

Regis' tennis team opened an 18-match schedule under Coach Pete McLaughlin March 26, hosting Southern Colorado State College at Regis.

The tennis schedule:

March 26 — Southern Colorado State College*; March 28 — Colorado State University; March 31 — University of Denver; April 4 — Colorado State University*; April 5 — Colorado College*; April 7 — Colorado School of Mines; April 10 — Eastern New Mexico University; April 12 — Texas Western College; April 13 — St. Joseph's College; April 22 — Colorado State College*; April 24 — Southern Colorado State College; April 29 — New Mexico Highlands University*; May 1 — St. Joseph's College*, University of Colorado*; May 4 — University of Denver*; May 10 — Colorado State College; May 12 — Colorado School of Mines*; May 13 — Colorado College.

*—Home match.

Golfers, under the coaching of the Rev. Richard F. Bocklage, S.J., have an eight-match schedule, beginning April 2 against Colorado School of Mines. Regis will use Los Verdes Golf Club as its home course for the season.

The complete golf schedule:

April 2 — Colorado School of Mines*; April 3 — Triangular with Mines and Colorado State University at Golden; April 16 — Colorado State College*; April 17 — Colorado College; April 23 — Colorado College*; April 26 — Ft. Lewis A & M College*; April 30 — Air Force Academy; May 7-8 — Pike's Peak Tournament, Broadmoor and Air Force Academy; May 12 — Colorado State College.

*—Home match.

SPORTS

Ranger Guard Tony Reed drives for a layup in St. Michael's game.

Early-March home losses to a pair of Rocky Mountain area opponents put the finishing touches on a 1964-65 basketball season that produced few bright spots for a hearty band of Regis College Rangers.

Colorado State University, with its regulars sitting on the bench, picked up an easy 82-49 win at Regis March 5 while the University of Denver rolled to its top point production of the season March 6 with a 106-72 victory.

Unfortunately the Rangers were on the short end of the score 20 of 26 times as they finished with a season mark of 6 wins against 20 losses, the poorest Regis record in 19 years.

Coach Mick Pahl, in his first season at the Regis reigns, guided his young club to a 4-4 mark through the first eight games. Two victories in the next 18 games, Feb. 2 against Colorado College and Feb. 27 against Nebraska Wesleyan, made it a long season.

After senior lettermen Jon Rapp and Roger Harris were dropped from the squad Jan. 23, Pahl regrouped his forces and built a starting club that included junior veterans Jay Coakley, a forward, and Tony Reed, a guard; sophomore guard Don Chavez; freshman center Joe Kaveney; and senior Jack Coyne, a forward-center, who joined the squad at the semester break. Freshmen John Bennett, a center, and Chris Kostiuik, a guard, were relied upon for heavy reserve duty.

Regis also used senior Darrell Mudd and freshmen Tom Hoidal, Bob Scheck, Jim Mestl and Gary Kowalski on its varsity club.

The overall lack of height and experience gave the Regis club little opportunity to flex its muscles against a busy 26-game schedule that included four opponent clubs that moved into NCAA post-season tournaments. A busy 12-game stretch in February made the going even rougher.

But to their credit the hapless Regis gang stuck to their chores.

Final statistics show Coakley earned both the individual scoring and rebounding titles. He hit for 414 points, an average of 15.9 per game and had 205 rebounds. His top point effort was 29 points in the Ranger win over Nebraska Wesleyan.

Chavez, showing late season polish, used back-to-back 21-point games against Westminster and Nebraska Wesleyan to take second place scoring honors with 282 points, a 10.8 average. His running mate, Reed, was close behind with 247 points and a 9.5 average for the season. Reed hit a season high of 17 points in both initial Regis meetings against CSU and DU.

Coyne gave the Rangers much-needed rebounding strength, finished behind Coakley in that department with 151. He climaxed his abbreviated collegiate cage career by taking Ranger scoring honors in the finale against DU with 18 points.

Kaveney, one of the squad's tallest members at 6-4, was fifth in scoring with a 163-point total, a 6.3 average.

As a team Regis hit 38.2 per cent from the field during the year but picked up in free throw shooting with a final 68.8 per cent. The Rangers averaged 63.1 points per game, against opponents' 79.1 average.

Former Jesuit Faculty Member Dies in Illinois

The Rev. Mark S. Gross, S.J., former member of the Regis College and High School faculties, died Feb. 11 at Decatur, Ill.

Father Gross joined the Regis High School faculty in 1941 and was later an Associate Professor of English and Religion with the College.

He was transferred from Regis in June, 1962, when he was named Spiritual Father of St. Joseph Hall at Decatur.

MGM Buys Film Rights to Fr. Faherty Novel

A novel written by a former member of the Jesuit faculty at Regis College will be made into a film by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The Novel, A Wall for San Sebastian, written by the Rev. William Faherty, S.J., is based on a legend Father Faherty heard 12 years ago in the mission of San Acacio, one of Colorado's oldest villages.

Father Faherty first wrote a short story about the legend and expanded it into novel length at the urging of Denver novelist William E. Barrett. MGM purchased the film rights last summer. A Denver native, James Webb, author of How the West Was Won, has agreed to write the film adaptation.

April Lectures

Two lectures remain on the 1965 Regis College Spring Lecture Series.

The Rev. Robert R. Boyle, S.J., Associate Professor of English at Regis College, will lecture Wednesday, April 7, on "The World of Gerard Manley Hopkins' Poems: an illustrated lecture dealing with scenes in Scotland, England, the Isles of Wight and Wales."

Father Boyle will show slides taken by Charles Roitz, '61, during a European tour he and Mr. Roitz made last summer. Father Boyle's lecture is being sponsored by the College Men's Sodality.

John L. Murphy, of the University of Colorado English Department, has chosen a unique title for his lecture at Regis, Wednesday, April 21. He will discuss "Shakespeare, the Secret Agent of the Jesuits: an investigation of the Elizabethan-Jesuit underground." The Regis College Library Club is sponsoring the lecture.

First lecture in the Spring Series, sponsored by the Regis College Theatre Guild, was presented March 4 by James Sandoe, Associate Professor of Libraries at the University of Colorado and a noted authority on Shakespeare.

A small but enthusiastic group of Regis College alumni attended a Regis Club meeting in Wichita, Kans., Jan. 23. Regis representatives at the meeting were the Rev. Bernard S. Karst, S.J., Alumni Moderator, and Director of Public Relations George Reinert and Mrs. Reinert.
