President David M. Clarke, S.J. confers a Bachelor of Science degree on Thomas P. Nevin.
The $15 million COMMITMENT TO THE FUTURE development program has surpassed $10 million in gifts and commitments as of May 30, 1986. Two-thirds of the goal of the five-year program has been achieved since the program was announced just 14 months ago on March 30, 1985.

“This exceptional progress reflects the dedicated and enthusiastic leadership of Peter H. Coors, chairman of the program, and Walter F. Imhoff, chairman of the Board of Trustees,” said Fr. David M. Clarke, S.J., president of Regis College.

“Under their leadership, more than 400 volunteers are working on behalf of Regis and more than 7,000 gifts or commitments have already been received from individuals and organizations toward program objectives. It is truly a dynamic period for Regis College,” Clarke said.

Regis College Elects Two Board Members

Robert J. Malone, president and chief executive officer of First Interstate Bank of Denver, and Richard D. McCormick, executive vice president of U S West, Inc. have been elected to the board of trustees of Regis College, according to Walter F. Imhoff, chairman of the board.

Malone has held his position at First Interstate Bank since July 1984. Before that he served as chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of the First Interstate Bank of Idaho in Boise. He is active in numerous community and professional organizations in the Denver area.

McCormick was president of Northwestern Bell before being named to his present position in April 1984. He began his career with AT&T in 1961. He has devoted years of service to philanthropic organizations.

Gifts and commitments to date include $5.19 million toward the $7.85 million Educational Excellence component, $1.58 million toward the $2.75 million Facilities and Grounds component, and $1.22 million toward the $4.40 million Annual Operating Support component. In addition, some $2.09 million in unrestricted commitments have been received and are pending designation for the program’s objectives by the Board of Trustees.

"Heartfelt thanks are extended to the entire Regis community," Fr. Clarke said. "This is an unprecedented effort in the history of Regis College, and the loyalty, encouragement, and generous support already demonstrated gives us confidence that our progress will continue unabated and that the program’s objective will be achieved."
Regis Honors Presidents Council at Dinner

The tenth annual Presidents Council Dinner was held March 22, 1986 at the Westin Hotel in Denver. The Presidents Council is comprised of individuals who have contributed $1,000 or more per year to Regis College to maintain and expand its educational goals. John V. Saeman II, chief executive officer of Daniels and Associates, is chairman of the council.

A special report was made at the dinner on the progress of Commitment to the Future, a five-year, $15 million development program. Walter F. Imhoff, chairman of the board of trustees of Regis College announced that $9.725 million (now at $10.1 million) has been committed since the program’s initiation one year ago.

Trustee Peter Coors, chairman of Commitment to the Future, and President David M. Clarke, SJ, expressed their appreciation to the approximately 200 council members for their generosity in helping Commitment to the Future reach its goal.

At the tenth annual Presidents Council Dinner, Fr. David M. Clarke, SJ, (left) President of Regis College and Walter F. Imhoff, (right) Chairman of the Regis College Board of Trustees, expressed their appreciation to Presidents Council members for rapidly moving Commitment to the Future towards its $15 million goal.

Regis College Hosts Directors Dinner

The 28th Annual Directors of Regis College Dinner was held May 10, 1986 in the Student Center Dining Hall. The Directors of Regis, led by President Vincent A. Mangus, is a group of alumni, parents and friends of Regis College who provide annual support of $150 to $999. Magnus recognized and thanked all the members for their invaluable assistance to Regis College, Walter F Imhoff, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, and Fr. David M. Clarke, SJ, President of Regis College reported on the progress of Commitment to the Future.

Ground Breaking Set for Wellness Center

Ground breaking for Regis College’s Wellness Center will be July 25, 1986. Plans are now being made for the ceremony which will include special recognition of the Coors Foundation.

The Coors Foundation’s contribution to the Commitment to the Future development program was designated for use in the construction of the Wellness Center.

At the center “wellness” will not be viewed as just the absence of illness, but as an approach to health. The addition of a wellness center will complete the services of Regis College that are offered to provide for an enhancement of the quality of life that results from a balanced lifestyle. This lifestyle incorporates emotional, social, spiritual, intellectual and physical well-being. The center will house the Life Directions program, which includes Campus Ministry, Personal and Career Counseling and Health Services. The center will include an activity center, therapy room, offices, classrooms and more. An upcoming issue of TODAY will provide detailed plans of the center.
Dr. Margaret McDonald Promoted to Prof. Emerita Upon Retirement

"Margaret's vision of what could be tomorrow is equaled by her perception of what is possible today."

Dr. Janay Downing, associate professor of English

As the end of the spring semester drew to a close, Regis College said goodbye and thank you to one of its finest teachers, Dr. Margaret McDonald, associate professor of English. In acknowledgement of McDonald's outstanding contributions to Regis College, President David M. Clarke, SJ, conferred the rank of professor Emerita upon her at the campus commencement ceremony May 4.

McDonald, who earned a doctoral degree in English from the University of Colorado in 1975, has taught English and literature for 23 years. Fifteen of those years have been devoted to instilling a pursuit of excellence in Regis College students, as comments from her former students attest:

• "I feel I discovered what excellence is in Dr. McDonald's class." Robyn Gronning, winner of the Robert R. Boyle Award for outstanding accomplishment in English literature and the English Honors Award.

• "Dr. McDonald both demands and develops excellence in her students, it's a quality that shines through in her. I was very honored to have had the opportunity to work with her." Mary Ann Lehmkuhle

• "Dr. McDonald has the rare ability to bring together literature, art, philosophy and history as an integrated whole in the student's mind and to create a dynamic and encompassing view of the past. Her love for the classics makes this view exciting." Bridget Carney

• "For the first time in my life literature became a true value to me. Dr. McDonald taught me the beauty in Shakespeare as well as the sorrow in Medea. I will never forget the love for literature that she has shared with me." Gayla Hector

Not only do McDonald's students find her a fascinating lady, but her colleagues hold her in special reverence too. In 1984 she was named Faculty Lecturer of the Year by her peers and addressed the relationship of language to culture. In her talk she said language today was in danger of losing one of its principal functions—the communication of the human spirit we call 'grace.' However, in talking with those who know and worked with Dr. Margaret McDonald, it becomes clear that she is the embodiment of graciousness. It is also apparent that her thoughtfulness, her belief in high standards, and her love for the arts and humanities, is adeptly imparted to others.

At a dinner in her honor many sincere approbations were made. Fr. Michael Sheenan, SJ, vice president for Academic Affairs, summed them up by making McDonald an honorary Jesuit (complete with a token collar) because she so closely exemplifies their ideals.

McDonald has been a long-time member of the James Joyce Society, and in her honor, friends and colleagues purchased a rare, signed, 1935 edition of James Joyce's Ulysses, complete with original Henri Matisse lithographs. The book was presented to McDonald at the dinner by Andrew Scrimgeour, director of Libraries, Senator Dennis Gallagher, assistant professor of communications and an Irish bagpiper in full regalia. The volume is in mint condition, as if it has never been read, (Gallagher quipped, "it must have come from the White House") and will be placed in a special collections room of Dayton Memorial Library.

McDonald served Regis College in many ways. She was coordinator of the Cultural Events Committee, campus representative for the Rhodes Scholarship Committee, director of the Humanities Division, and a very influential member of the Educational Policies Committee. McDonald said she enjoyed her work, that it was rewarding and intellectually invigorating to be a part of people who are devoted to the service of others. She added that she will miss the spirit of Regis, the spirit of liking one another and working with one another. But she plans to keep busy. She will take up water color painting and learn to play the piano.

MURPHY AND YASUI RECEIVE CIVIS PRINCEPS AWARD

In 1958, Regis College renewed a classic Roman tradition of honoring citizens who had achieved outstanding success in their field and thus contributed to their society. Civis princeps, meaning first citizen, is the highest honor awarded by Regis College. At the Career Program commencement ceremony, May 3, John P. Murphy and Minoru Yasui received the Civis Princeps award.

Murphy has been described by his colleagues as a "philosopher with street savvy." His fierce loyalty to the preservation of land and individual rights were the cornerstones of his 18 years of public service as a Boulder County commissioner. His representation of Longmont earned the respect and admiration of the entire community, and was significant in the growth and development of the Boulder County government. After his retirement in 1985, the Longmont Times-Call noted, "he left behind a legacy of good government." Murphy has kept his ties with Regis College over the years. During his acceptance remarks Murphy noted his appreciation to Regis: "That which has been accomplished by me in the past and present is the fruit of an education received at Regis...the Jesuits taught me that I had a responsibility to mankind."

John P. Murphy

Minoru Yasui, the second recipient of the award, is known as a tireless human rights advocate. His record of achievement and service is in keeping with the actions that drew him national attention in the 1940s and insured him a place in the history of efforts to preserve the rights of American individuals. His commitment to individuals' rights began in the early spring of 1942 when thousands of Japanese Americans were moved to internment camps during World War II. Yasui, against the counsel of his associates, used his legal training and background to test the constitutionality of such an order. Today, as a lawyer, director of Denver's Community Relations Commission until his retirement in 1983 and as a member of the Japanese American Citizens League, Yasui continues to work on solving the legitimate and difficult issues surrounding civil and human rights. After receiving his award, Yasui told the graduates that they are living in a great community and state, and that they have the capability to achieve heroic deeds.
Regis College celebrated its 108th commencement ceremony, May 4, with 152 graduates from the Campus Program. A perspective from the Class of 1986 was delivered by Shawn Hayes and a special symbolic award to signify the "one millionth graduate" from American Jesuit Colleges and Universities was presented to Mary Ann Lehmkuhle. She will compete with representatives from the other 27 Jesuit colleges and universities in the final round of selection of the millionth graduate. This person will win a trip to Versailles, France to participate in the World Congress of Jesuit Alumni.

Lucia Fongaro, John Flood and Augustine Flick line up to receive their degrees along with 149 of their campus classmates.

Dr. Margaret McDonald was promoted to Professor Emerita (see separate article) and the members of the class of 1936 were on hand to celebrate the 50th anniversary of their graduation. The Alumni Council recognized the achievements of fellow alums Judge James J. Delaney, John J. Conway and Hanley Dawson III.

ALUMNI ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

The Alumni Achievement Award was presented to Judge Delaney. This award honors individuals who have made exceptional achievements in their field of endeavor and have exemplified human and Judeo-Christian principles of ethics in their life and work.

Judge Delaney, senior judge of the Colorado Judicial System, graduated cum laude from Regis College in 1932. He went on to receive a law degree from the University of Denver in 1942 and completed additional studies at the University of Colorado and the University of Nevada. In addition to his distinguished career as a district court judge, Judge Delaney also taught in the public school system and at Regis College. He has published a significant number of articles on child and family law and is a member of numerous organizations related to juvenile and family justice.

In 1982 Judge Delaney was honored with the distinguished St. Thomas More Award by the Catholic Lawyers Guild for his contribution to his religion, his country and his profession. In 1983 he received the annual Children's Award from the Colorado Christian Home of Denver. Judge Delaney and his wife Rae are members of the Directors of Regis.

ALUMNI SERVICE AWARDS

John J. Conway and Hanley Dawson III received Alumni Service Awards. This award recognizes individuals who have contributed substantial service toward the advancement of Regis College and whose efforts reflect extraordinary dedication to the College and the Jesuit tradition of educational excellence.
Conway graduated from Regis College in 1954. He has served as an attorney with the Office of the Regional Solicitor of the Department of the Interior, as assistant attorney general of Colorado and as counsel to the Colorado Public Utilities Commission. Conway has tirelessly given of his time in a variety of volunteer roles for Regis College. He has served as national chairman of the Alumni Council, director of the Alumni Fund and the National Regis Club. Conway, who is currently a class representative and member of the Alumni Executive Council, was chosen Alumni of the Year by the 1984 Regis College Student Executive Board. He has participated in a variety of special alumni efforts and is a long-standing member of the Directors of Regis with his wife, Margaret.

Hanley Dawson III is president of Patrick Cadillac-BMW-Saab-Mitsubishi-Subaru in Schaumburg, IL, and director of five companies. He graduated from Regis College in 1965 and became a Regis College trustee in 1977. A member of the Young Presidents Organization, Dawson serves as secretary for the Chicago Chapter. Dawson has organized numerous events for Regis College alumni, parents and friends in the midwest. He was a member of the Task Force on Young Adult Students, a segment of the National Commission on the Future of Regis College. Currently Dawson is a member of the Chicago area committee for Commitment to the Future and chairman of the National Advisory Council. Hanley and his wife, Cathie, are life members of the Regis College President's Council.

CAREER PROGRAMS

A record turn-out of families and friends attended the Career Program commencement ceremony held May 3 at Regis College. There were 310 graduates from RECEP II (including those who finished in August), 23 graduates from the Master's in Business Administration (MBA) program and nine graduates who received the degree of Master of Arts in Adult Christian Community Development (MAACCD). Kent Stutsman, from RECEP II and Glenn Slensker from the MBA program shared their perspectives with the commencement audience.

The 1986 commencement was the first for Regis College students in Sterling, Colo. The program was started in 1984 in cooperation with Northeastern Junior College.

Lawrence Wilcox, one of the Sterling graduates, delivered the commencement benediction. Wilcox's graduation was very special as he had suffered a stroke in 1980 that caused him to lose all conceptual skills and left him paralyzed on one side. Wilcox had earned a degree in 1967 and then joined the Navy, where he did electrical engineering and naval intelligence work for 12 years. After his stroke his doctors were not optimistic about his chances to regain his physical and mental abilities. "But I'm a stubborn guy," Wilcox declared, "I made up my mind to prove them wrong."

Wilcox began taking classes at Northeastern in 1983, one course at a time. As he continued to improve physically and as some previous knowledge slowly returned, he built up his course load. This May he graduated Summa Cum Laude with a B.S. degree in technical management from Regis College. Wilcox is determined to become fluent in French and to eventually work for a multinational company.

REGIS COLLEGE
COLORADO SPRINGS

Regis College in Colorado Springs held graduation May 24 at the Pikes Peak Center for 180 graduates.

Malcolm S. Knowles, a world renowned expert on adult education, and a longtime consultant to Regis College received an honorary doctorate degree.

Knowles is actively engaged in consulting and conducting workshops with business, industry, government agencies, educational institutions, religious institutions, and voluntary agencies throughout the world, on all matters pertaining to the education of adults. He has been the executive director of the Adult Education Association of the U.S. and director for adult education for several YMCAs. The most recent of his 17 books is, The Adult Learner: A Neglected Species.

Stephen Laine, president and Chief Executive Officer of United Bank of Garden of the Gods, delivered the student perspective. Laine received a B.S. degree in business administration. Charles O'Neal, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel, received special recognition for a lifetime of achievement in education.

Regis College Makes Commitment

Attending college is expected to be the stepping stone for a student's future improvement and success. However, some students are denied the chance for higher education when they do not meet the entrance requirements for the college of their choice, primarily because their standardized test scores or high school grades are insufficient.

Regis College recognizes that traditional entrance criterion, while important, can be affected by a variety of circumstances that might impact test scores, but have little bearing on what the student is able to achieve.

With that belief and out of a desire to assist these students in reaching their academic potential, Regis College took an innovative step in 1976 and developed the Commitment Program.

The Commitment Program accepts approximately 40 freshmen annually who do not meet Regis’ entrance requirements, but who have demonstrated the commitment, interest and capability to obtain a college degree. Once accepted into the year-long program the students take 14 hours of intensive reading, writing and study skills courses and 18 hours of core curriculum courses. They receive personal guidance from specially trained teachers throughout the year, and upon completion of the courses the students move into the standard Regis College courses. The success of the program is demonstrated by the fact that 98 percent of the students who began the Commitment Program over the past two years have successfully moved on to standard curriculum courses.

The average Commitment Program student comes to Regis with ACT composite scores of less than 18 out of a perfect 36, SAT combined scores of less than 810 out of a possible 1600, and a high school GPA of less than 2.25. Yet, with strong recommendations from high school teachers and administrators, and through the commitment acceptance process, reasons for the low test scores are analyzed. Some typical reasons for low test results center around motivation, family problems, poor test-taking skills, and a dislike for high school. Given a second chance, these students are ready to prove themselves capable of graduating from college.

The Regis College program is directed by Dr. Carla Clements, assistant professor of English, and manager of the Regis College Learning Center. Clements is also co-president of the Colorado Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities and has added her unique philosophy and style to the Commitment Program. She refuses to use such words as “deficiency” and “remediation,” or “learning disabled.”

“I see it as a learning difference,” Clements said. Other colleges have development programs that assume “remediation,” or “learning disabled.”

“I see it as a learning difference,” Clements said. Other colleges have development programs that assume reading and writing are skills that can be “fixed” by learning the fundamentals, such as sentence diagramming. Clements believes that reading and writing are “processes” that can be improved by practice, feedback and confidence.

Clements requires each student to read 3,500 pages in one semester. The students may choose from a large variety of topics, but the assignment is structured specifically (down to how many words per minute a student must be able to read) so that the student accomplishes the task. In class collaborative learning is stressed. The students talk and write about the readings and then read each others papers to offer feedback. There are separate writing labs and a course on study skills which teaches the students to budget their time, to take effective notes, and to recognize what and how to study.

The students are tested when they start the Commitment Program and then again throughout the year to measure progress. Clements said she often sees an improvement of two and a half to three year grade levels in 16 weeks.

What Commitment Program Students Say About the Program:

I went to a private high school that was very competitive. I got off on the wrong foot my freshman year and was never able to compensate for it. The Commitment Program is the best! I have all new study habits that work. The program pushes you just to show you how much you can accomplish, not to the point of quitting. I've never met anyone like Carla. She is so smart and caring and can get through to a whole class. The program enabled me to get off on the right foot in college.” —This student graduated in May and is continuing with plans to become a lawyer.

I went to a private high school and had no motivation to succeed. The school was oriented towards glory seekers and I was not a conformist, so they just tried to sweep me through. I also was having family stuff going on. My high school GPA was a 3.25. A counselor suggested trying to go to Regis College because of the Commitment Program. I think the program is unique for its quality. It was a life saver for me.

I needed support being far from my home and I got it from Carla. I am a senior now, but Carla is still my friend and I can go to her for help. There were some rough spots when I started taking all regular classes. But I had learned how to challenge myself, I worked it out by tape recording classes, and rewriting my notes. I had heard so much about how I couldn't do it, but I knew I could prove them wrong and I did.” —A recent graduate with majors in computer science (3.25 GPA) and business administration (2.75 GPA). She completed an internship at the Apache Corporation where she tested and designed daily production systems.

“I was not a good test taker, I bombed the ACT, and had a high school GPA of 1.7. When I had to go into the Commitment Program I felt different, I thought it was awful that I couldn't even get into a regular college, but then as my grades went up I didn't care how I was looked at. Regis gave me the chance.” —A May graduate with a 3.0 GPA.”
Michael Frederick Named To All-Academic Team

Regis College senior Michael Frederick is one of five collegiate athletes who have been selected to the GTE/CoSIDA Academic All-District At-Large Team in the College Division.

Frederick, an All-American soccer player from Englewood, Colorado, earned the prestigious award for his outstanding achievements both academically and athletically. He majored in Philosophy and English, and earned a bachelor's degree in May.

By gaining a spot on the Academic All-District Team, Frederick is now eligible for the Academic All-American Team, which will be announced on June 29.

The GTE/CoSIDA Academic All-District At-Large Team is selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA). Regis College is situated in District VII, which includes all colleges in Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

More than 200 athletes were nominated in District VII. The At-Large Team represents 15 men's sports, including cross country, fencing, golf, gymnastics, lacrosse, skiing, soccer, swimming, tennis, track and field, volleyball, water polo and wrestling.

Joining Frederick on the Academic All-District Team are Rich Tighe, a cross country runner from Lons College; Steve Anderson, a wrestler from North Dakota State University; Steve Johnson, a track and field performer at Luther College; and Willie Walsh, a cross country runner from Pittsburg State University in Kansas.

Investment or Gift?
A Regis Gift Annuity is Both!

“A charitable gift annuity is a way to receive a guaranteed income for the rest of your life and to make a significant contribution to Regis at the same time. The rate of return is higher the older you are. Because a gift annuity is partly a gift and partly an investment, a portion of the amount you invest is tax deductible. In addition, part of the annual payment you receive is free from income tax. Gift annuities may be purchased at $1,000 or above. Your annuity gift will assist in building the Regis College endowment.”

Fr. John J. Callahan, S.J.
