ADMILL+ IN IFCOOR I CALLACHER

Warren Bennis and Burt Nanus, in their popular book Leaders, not only dispel the myth that leaders are born, not made, but also make the point that "Leaders are perpetual learners."

The Regis College Leadership Program, now in its fourth year, shares Bennis' and Nanus' belief.

"Colleges and universities in the United States are increasingly questioned about their competency to develop future leaders," explained Sally Ryan, assistant dean for student life and director of the leadership program. "Therefore, based on student development research, we began a program four years ago with the incoming freshman class directed exclusively to leadership development."

This co-curricular program, which currently involves 70 students, is comprised of five elements:

• Mentoring. A one-to-one learning relationship between the student and a mentor focused on modeling behavior and extended dialogue.

· Academic Course. A three-credit course that exposes students to both leadership theory and skill building.

• Seminars. Two presentations are held each semester with recognized leaders in the city, state and nation.

· Yearly Themes. Each year the student participates - freshman, sophomore, junior and senior - they concentrate their efforts on two of eight areas of emphasis in the program: intellectual competence, interpersonal skills, autonomy, sense of purpose, multi-cultural awareness and tolerance, aesthetic awareness, healthful lifestyle, and moral, ethical and spiritual development.

• Activities Transcript. The student develops a record of achievement and experience through participation in both curricular and co-curricular activities which contribute to the student's growth and development as a future leader.

Incoming freshmen are invited to apply for the program each year, Ryan pointed out, and 30 are accepted. Since the Leadership Development Program is a four-year commitment, students can enter the program only in their freshman year.

Joan Arruabarrena, a senior from Montrose, Colo., is one of the program's pioneers. She has seen it develop during her time at Regis.

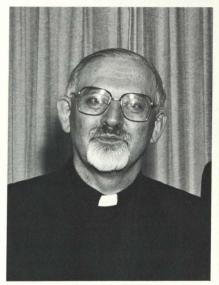

"I think it is a good program. Since it is relatively new, I've seen it grow and improve over the past four years," she pointed out. "My freshman year was very important because it was my first time away from home. I had a wonderful mentor and that helped relieve some of the stress you go through in that first year."

"We have been extremely pleased with the quality of students involved in the program," Ryan said. "The average cumulative grade point average for our leadership students is above 3.2 in our 4.0 system."

The initial participants in the Leadership Program will graduate in May 1987.

SUPERIOR GENERAL VISITS REGIS COLLEGE

Father Peter Hans-Kolvenbach, S.J., superior general of the Society of Jesus (Jesuits), visited the Regis College campus in October to speak with the board of trustees of the College and of Regis Jesuit High School.

Father Peter Hans-Kolvenbach, S. J.

Father Kolvenbach, who is from Nijmegen, Holland, was in the United States to conduct meetings with the Provincials from the 10 Jesuit provinces in the United States. The meetings were held at Sacred Heart Retreat House in Sedalia, Colorado.

During his stay at the College, Fr. Kolvenbach was presented an honorary degree by Walter F. Imhoff, chairman of the board of trustees of Regis College. He also held meetings with the Regis Jesuit community. Following his meetings in Colorado, Fr. Kolvenbach returned to Rome.

BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY PROGRAM

Each year Regis College conducts a fund raising effort to provide support for its ongoing programs that tuition alone will not fully cover. Several different sources and support programs make up this "Annual Fund."

The Business and Industry support program is chaired by Richard D. McCormick, president of U S WEST and a trustee of Regis College. McCormick is putting together a number of corporate teams who will seek support from the business community for the College during an intensive campaign scheduled for March 5—April 10, 1987.

Some of those organizing corporate teams are: Donald R. Drummer, senior vice president at Colorado State Bank; James M. Gerken, vice president at Hanifen Imhoff; Edward F. Hanifen, chairman of the board at Greater Metro Bank Holding Company; Donald J. Kany, executive vice president and chief financial officer at First Interstate Bank of Denver; Richard C. Kelly, treasurer of Public Service Company; and Janice Payan, director of Implementation Planning at U S WEST.

McCormick noted that a large proportion of Denver-area businesses currently employ Regis graduates. In addition, employees of major businesses along the Front Range are enrolled in MBA and RECEP Career Programs. Last year Regis served 3,863 working adults in these programs. The College's partnership with area business is a key factor in the continued growth of the college as a center for adult education.

THEATER HAPPENINGS

John McDonald has joined Regis College as theater director, replacing Fr. Gary Seibert. McDonald is familiar with Regis, his mother is Margaret McDonald, retired professor emerita of English. He studied acting at New York University and then went on to receive a master of fine arts degree from Catholic University in Washington, DC. along with such noted alumni as John Voight, Ed McMahon and Philip Bosco. McDonald is a union television and radio actor and says his favorite role so far was that of MacDuff in the play MacBeth directed by Geraldine Fitzgerald. In additon to acting, McDonald has also directed plays in New York.

The next play McDonald will direct at Regis College is Hedda Gabler written by Henrik Ibsen. This play is about an independent woman with a need to accomplish living in an era (late 19th Century) where society did not tolerate accomplished women. The moral dilemma and personal conflict make for a high paced realistic drama. This play will run from Feb. 12–22.

Then, from April 1–4, a musical titled HMS Pinafore will be performed. For more information on theater productions, call 458-4160.

ANNUAL FUNDS COUNCIL

The Annual Funds Council, under the leadership of Frank E. Blatter ('61), is hard at work on the largest annual fund goal in the history of Regis College — $875,000 from 4,000 alumni, parents, friends, foundations and corporations.

Blatter cited the work of the Annual Funds Council as an extremely important part of Regis' development effort because "the annual fund dollars go directly to the annual operating budget." Regis has balanced its budget for the past 11 years, in part because of the efforts of the volunteers in the Annual Funds Council. Specific programs of the Annual Funds Council include: Presidents Council, Directors of Regis, Alumni Council, Parents Council, Business and Industry Program, Faculty/Staff Program and National Telefunds.

Blatter said he is especially pleased that Annual Funds leadership for all programs is in place and fundraising efforts are well underway. Volunteer leaders in the Annual Funds Council for 1986-87 are: Robert J. Malone, president and chief executive officer of First Interstate Bank of Denver, is chairman of the Presidents Council: Vincent A. Magnus ('59), treasurer of Buckley Powder Company, is president of the Directors of Regis; William J. Fortune ('69), president of First Interstate Bank of Centennial, heads the Alumni Council; Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Kaveny ('65) are national chaircouple for the Parents Council; Richard D. McCormick, president and chief operating officer of U S WEST, is serving as chairman of the Business and Industry Council; Thomas Kennedy, assistant to the president, is chairman of the Faculty/Staff Program; and James Gerken ('82), vice president, Hanifen, Imhoff, Inc., is chairman of the 1986-87 Telefund.

GROUND-BREAKING FOR LIFE DIRECTIONS CENTER

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Regis College Life Directions Center, the first new building on campus since West Hall in 1972, were held July 25.

Presiding over the ceremonies was Walter F. Imhoff, chairman of the board of trustees. Others participating included Fr. David M. Clarke, S.J., president; William K. Coors, president of the Adolph Coors Foundation, which provided major funding for the building; Mary Ann Lehmkuhle, Regis student; Fr. William T. Miller, S.J., assistant professor of religious studies; and Fr. Lawrence St. Peter, representing the Archdiocese of Denver.

At a special luncheon following the groundbreaking ceremonies, Fr. James J. Gill, S.J., trustee and widely recognized expert in human development, addressed faculty, staff and students on the importance of the Life Directions Program in the growth of the student.

The new building is scheduled for completion in May 1987.

NEW BOARD MEMBERS

Three new members—Rev. Richard Blake, S.J., Henry Burdick, and Rev. Charles M. Shelton, S.J.—have been elected to the Regis College Board of Trustees, according to Walter F. Imhoff, chairman.

Rev. Richard Blake, S.J., is a visiting scholar at Georgetown University. Prior to joining the Georgetown community, Fr. Blake served for 15 years on the staff of America Magazine. He is a graduate of Fordham University and earned his doctorate at Northwestern University.

Henry Burdick of Hidden Hills, California is President of Pharmavite Company, a manufacturer of vitamins, shampoos and gel-like medicine capsules.

Rev. Charles M. Shelton, S.J., is a graduate student in clinical psychology at Chicago-Loyola. He earned his bachelor's and master's degrees from St. Louis University.

CHILEAN EXILE SPEAKS AT REGIS COLLEGE

On November 24 Veronica de Negri, a Chilean exile, told her story of human rights violations in Chile to a capacity crowd in the Science Amphitheater. A good portion of the audience had heard her story on the previous night's edition of 60 Minutes. De Negri's appearance at Regis was in conjunction with Amnesty International.

De Negri, who received two standing ovations from the overflow crowd, was exiled from her native Chile in 1977 after being harrassed, threatened and severly tortured by government military forces. Starting a new life in Washington, D.C. with her two sons, she took work as a hotel maid, learned English and eventually became a youth counselor at a drug and alcohol abuse center.

Last May, de Negri's son, Rodrigo, went back to Chile. De Negri said he was a sensitive and intelligent 19-yearold, who after living in Chile and America was searching for his identity. On July 2 he went to photograph a planned protest in a poor section of Santiago. Before anything began, military patrolmen with painted faces dispersed the crowd. For unknown reasons they seized Rodrigo and 18-year-old Carmen Quintana, brutally beat them, poured gasoline on them and set them on fire. They then transported them to a ditch at the edge of the city and left them for dead. With tears in her eyes, de Negri told the crowd the horrible details of what happened next and of Rodrigo's death four days later.

Quintana is alive, though it will be years before all the skin grafts and rehabilitation will end. She was moved to a burn unit in Canada after the incident received world-wide attention.

Veronica de Negri addressed a full house.

WOODROW WILSON VISITING FELLOW

Fall semester's Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellow was Nora Sayre, a former film critic for The New York Times and author of Sixties Going on Seventies, a book which was nominated for the 1974 National Book Award in the category of contemporary affairs. Sayre was a correspondent for a leading newspaper in England and has written many publications on cultural and political subjects. Her varied background made her an interesting speaker in and out of the classroom. Visiting Fellows are successful men and women from a variety of fields who are recruited by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation to visit small liberal arts colleges.

FALL FACULTY CONVOCATION FEATURES NOBEL PEACE PRIZE RECIPIENT

The Regis College Fall Faculty Convocation, which consists of the Faculty Lecturer of the Year award and the Faculty Conference, was held on Sept. 19 and 20.

Dr. Noreen Dornenburg, Faculty Lecturer of the Year.

Dr. Noreen Dornenburg, associate professor of administrative science, was selected as Faculty Lecturer of the Year. Her thought-provoking talk, "Structure and Grace", was a philosophical look at the creativity and grace which can be derived from a true understanding of abstract organizational structures. Dornenburg used Regis College as an example.

The Fall Faculty Conference, "Perspectives on Peace and World Order," opened with a keynote address by Nobel Peace Prize recipient, Betty Williams. Her talk was a moving account of her experiences with war in Ireland and other countries. Williams' profound commitment to peace and learning to love one another was very evident, said Dr. Ginny Epstein, assistant professor of education and conference chairperson. Williams was so impressed with the Regis Community and the display of the Vietnam Veterans replica, that she extended her visit by two days.

After Williams' address faculty members met in small groups to discuss four topics: In the Nuclear Shadow: Children's Responses to Nuclear War; Religious and Ethical Perspectives on the Use of Nuclear Power: Is War Different in the Nuclear Age?; and Bringing Peace and Social Justice Issues into the Classroom. The conference closed with a Readers Theater performance called "First Person Perspectives; Vietnam." The excellent presentations by Regis students and staff, which moved many audience members to tears, was produced by Dr. Mary Hart, assistant professor of communication.

NEW REGIS COLLEGE CAMPUSES

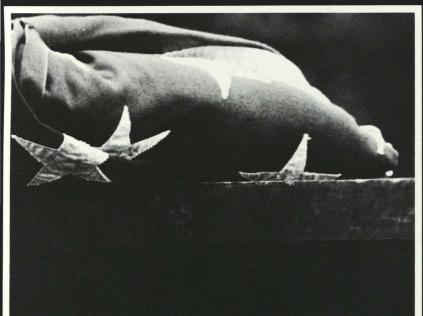

The Regis College Southeast Campus has moved to a larger building in Greenwood Plaza to accommodate its tremendous growth. Located at South Quebec Court, the 14 modern classrooms are used by nearly 900 adult students a week. The students are either seeking a degree through the Regis Career Education Program (RECEP) or the Master in Business Administration (MBA) Program.

Regis College, in cooperation with Aims Community College of Greelev. opened a new campus in downtown Loveland this fall to serve the northern Colorado adult education needs. The campus will give Regis a permanent location and allow it to expand its current services. Editors of the Loveland Daily Reporter-Herald expressed their pleasure that Regis College had chosen to meet the needs of adult students in Loveland with its unique degree-completion program in an editorial shortly after the announcement of the new facility. "... Regis is meeting the needs of the marketplace," the editorial read. "The Loveland campus is part of the Regis Career Education Program (RECEP), which offers a degree program in a condensed format...We are pleased that Regis has chosen Loveland as a campus site. We believe the college's goal of seeking 'an even greater standard of excellence by providing...a meaningful and applicable educational experience' will find a receptive audience in Loveland."

The Regis College Southeast Campus is now in Greenwood Plaza.

A MOVING WALL

From September 13th through the 21st a half-scale replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. was on display at Regis College. The creation of Vietnam veteran John Devitt, the "Wall" contains the names of more than 58,000 men and women who were killed in the Vietnam War.

The Wall was an incredibly moving experience for most of the 30,000 people who saw it. It was often described as a painful, yet positive catharsis by many people who had tried to bury their feelings and memories about the Vietnam experience. The Wall was also a strong educational tool for Regis students and others, who are the first of a generation that does not remember, or has not learned much about America's longest war.

Many events coincided with the Wall's display. A contingent of Vietnam veterans made a five-day walk from Ft. Collins to the Wall to call attention to those who are missing-inaction, or still believed to be held prisoner in Indochina. Well-known Vietnam veteran singers, Tim Holiday and Michael Martin, played before a packed Science Amphitheater and Regis Readers Theater participants read letters from Vietnam. In addition to special classes, each day, in front of the Wall, there was a continuous reading of the names on the Wall by volunteers.

The TODAY cover and the following pages photographically record the Wall's stay at Regis College.

OPENING CEREMONY REMARKS

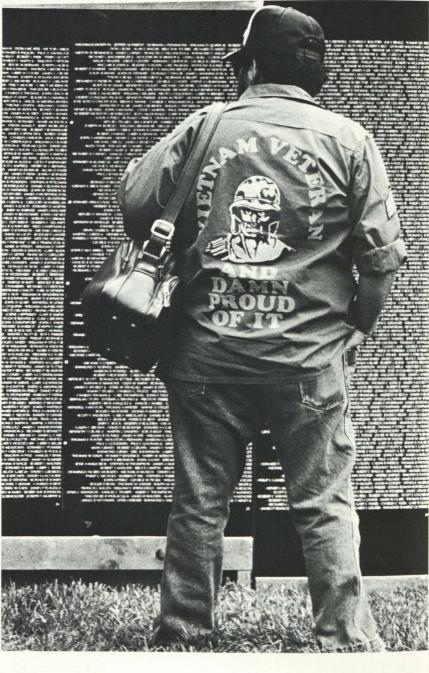

By Andrew Scrimgeour, Director of Regis College Libraries

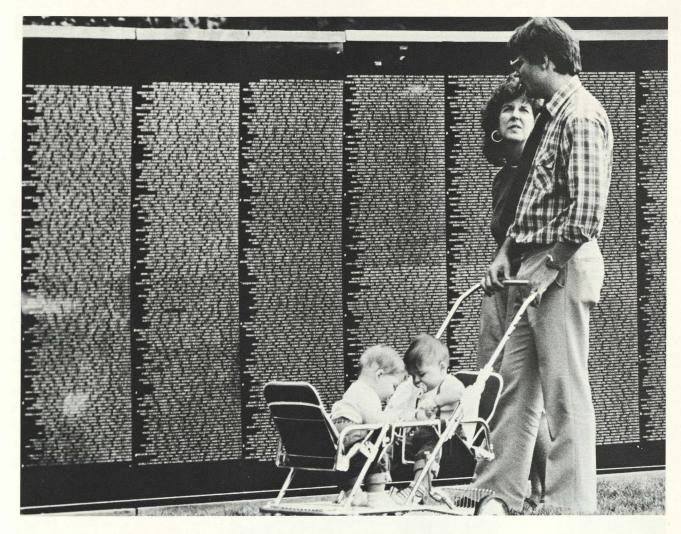

We are gathered at a sacred place, the Vietnam Veterans War Memorial, a wall of names. It is a wailing wall. It is a last enduring body count, a book of the generations. It is a mirror where our tears made the names of family and friends. It is an altar about to be littered with the evidence of burdens laid down.

It is difficult to come to the wall for the Vietnam War is not over, it still rages. Perhaps that conflict can only be over when we have learned at what a cost it was waged for everyone it touched, then and now, this morning and this coming week we will be remembering, counting the cost, and praying, praying that rice will grow again, our missing will be found. Maimed bodies and spirits will be healed.

God, grant us courage to face the wall. God grant us peace.

THE WAILING WALL

by Floyd String, Vietnam Veteran

With outstretched arms, you reached for me A magnetic block, of cold hard stone, Breathing life into endless death, In my heart you whispered, "Welcome Home."

Into the wall I felt the pull, "Come closer, that you may heal. Die with me and you will live... Touch my names and you will heal." Knees collapsed to sacred soil Names etched into my mind Like a rock that drops in a bottomless pit, was the grief I buried and fought to leave behind.

Memories poured forth, a living river, Turning blackish then blood-red. In a piercing cry of surrender and defeat— I embraced my brothers dead. Trance-like eyes gazed the ocean expanse Color blue illuminated in light. I merged and returned to my source, my home, No longer this battle to fight.

I VISITED THE MEMORIAL TODAY

By Mike Shomion, Regis College Student Body President I visited the memorial today. I felt anger and pain for the men who had to go away, I switched places with a man I picked from the wall... twenty years ago today I saw his unit taking a fall.

I felt his fear as I looked through his eyes and placed myself beside him to watch his best friend die.

The picture became clearer as I sank into his mind,

I asked myself the same questions he had many times...

Why am I here?...When do I go home? The ugliness, the pain, the lies...all alone.

The frustration and the anxiety grew day by day, until suddenly one night, I felt an enemy's bullet take the pain away.

This scared me back to myself and my place by the wall.

I took my hand one last time and ran it over the boy's name who I had become that fall.

Again I felt the emotions, the anger, the pain . . .yet I felt comfort knowing the boy's name would always remain.

I will not forget my friend or the thousands more who gave their lives for us, the ultimate gift of being born.

We will return to class tomorrow and the wall will have been moved away...

But in our hearts and in our souls the names and memories will always stay.

OUTSTANDING TELEFUND

The 1986-87 Fall Telefund, under the volunteer leadership of Chairman Jim Gerken ('82) and Vice Chairman Kevin O'Connor ('73), was the most successful in Regis College history.

A goal of $180,000 was established for the volunteer effort which covered five weeks. "We were extremely pleased with the commitment by the more than 200 volunteers," Gerken said. "We had strong turnouts each night and were able to surpass our goal by a large margin." Gerken reports the final tally for the Fall Telefund effort was $208,000 in pledges, a substantial increase over the $162,000 given in the 1985 autumn effort.

The Spring Telefund will be held in March and April.

NEW DEVELOPMENT STAFF PERSON

Ken Ciancio has been named assistant director of Planned Giving in the Regis College Development Office. A 1986 graduate of Regis College, Ciancio assists individuals who wish to contribute through the College's Partners in Planning program. Partners in Planning seeks outright gifts of life insurance, property and real estate as well as deferred gifts made through bequests or life income agreements such as charitable gift annuities and the various forms of charitable trusts.

ANNUAL DINNERS

The Presidents Council Dinner will be held March 28, 1987 at the Westin Hotel. This dinner has been held each spring since 1976 to honor individuals who have contributed $1,000 or more to the College in a year. Robert J. Malone, president and chief executive officer of First Interstate Bank of Denver and a Regis College trustee, is chairman of the Presidents Council.

The Directors of Regis College Dinner will be held May 9, 1987 at Regis. This dinner is in honor of members of the Directors of Regis College, which is chaired by Vincent A. Mangus, treasurer of Buckley Powder Company. These members have contributed from $150 to $999 to the College over the past year.

GOOD SAMARITANS

On November 22 the Archdiocese of Denver opened Samaritan House, a shelter for the homeless. On hand to help with the move and to feed the first residents were 50 Regis students and members of the Regis faculty. The Student Executive Board was responsible for securing the donated meals.
