SANTOS!

M A R T I N A N

Artistic works often depict spiritual subjects, from statues of Jesus Christ to sculptures of Buddha. Art reflects societies, cultures or lifestyles, as witnessed by the ethnic paintings of R. C. Gorman or the western masterpieces of Charles Russell. Art is realistic or abstract, traditional or contemporary, sophisticated or quaint, sleek or rough-hewn.

So it is with "Santos"... all of the above, yet more, much more than an art form. Santos are also "tradition."

Santo is the Spanish word for "Saint," and santos are folk-art depictions of saints and other religious subjects. Early santos made in New Mexico date back to the early 1700s, and were revered as having holy powers to help in time of trouble. Santos are in the form of carved wooden figures ("bultos"), or are painted on wooden panels ("retablos"). The creators are called "santeros" (men) and "santeras" (women).

Individual saints were believed to be able to make life more secure in the early Spanish colonies, and artistic images graced every home. The santos might be requested to bring rain for parched crops, or heal an illness. If the "blessing" came to pass, then the icons would be surrounded with flowers and candles, as a way of giving thanks. "We see old santos as artifacts, but they were part of the survival mechanism essential to these frontier families," explains Fr. Thomas Steele, S.J., a Jesuit priest and professor at Regis, who has been collecting santos for the past 30 years. His 300-plus collection is housed in the new gallery at Dayton Memorial Library on the Regis campus.

Some depictions are crude carvings or childlike paintings, as individuals created their own icons to bless their homes. Others were commissioned works of art, ordered by those who could afford the expenditure. Fr. Steele explained the hierarchy of the santos as starting with Jesus Christ, who promised salvation, followed by Mary and the angels, who dealt with fears of the devil and his powers. Then came the broad variety of saints who handled family problems, plagues, and the variety of issues facing people in their daily lives.

A renowned scholar in Hispanic religious traditions in New Mexico, Fr. Steele has written two books on the subject. The first, Santos and Saints: The Religious Folk Art of Hispanic New Mexico, was printed in 1974, and rewritten in 1994. The second, The Regis Santos: Thirty Years of Collecting, 1966 - 1996, has recently been released by LPD Press. This latest book details the Regis collection, including the very first piece, which Fr. Steele found while shopping for a picture frame. He writes, "I came across a piece of masonite with an old, dirty, faded, torn, creased canvas glued to it, a canvas that bore a dim image of a black-clad female figure in a dull brown background. I was intrigued indeed." But, feeling the $12 asking price was too high, he left. Later, in Santa Fe, Fr. Steele was visiting one of the museums, and noticed an oil painting of a black-clad female figure in a dull dark background. "It was identified as an early 18th Century Mexican oil painting. Now, if this is worth putting in a museum display, I said to myself, that painting in the shop is worth 12 dollars." Fr. Steele returned to purchase the piece, negotiating the price down to $10. Art experts identified it as an oil painting of "Nuestra Señora de la Soledad" (Our Lady of Solitude), dating from 1725-1750.

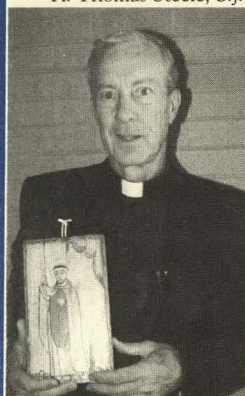

That was the beginning. The following years saw Fr. Steele finding santos in obscure places, as he bargained, bartered and built his eclectic collection of historic and contemporary pieces. One piece even bears the tale of having been found under the floor of an old house in a neighborhood that was being razed.

Fr. Steele's Jesuit commitment is evident in the many pieces depicting San Ignacio de Loyola, the founder of the Jesuit order. One painting by artist Rafael Aragon (1820-65) is especially "dear to his heart." He writes, "Acquiring this broke the budget for an entire year; I have never for a moment regretted it. I had been looking for a quarter of a century for a superb Ignacio without ever having one come up for sale. When the moment arrived in 1991, I did not hesitate."

When President Bill Clinton and Pope John Paul II met at Regis in 1993, Fr. Steele arranged a gift for each — contemporary depictions of Saint Ignatius Loyola by renowned santeros

Jose Raul Esquibel, '65

Santero is the Spanish term for a wood carver who makes images of saints and other religious figures. As one of 17 santeros featured in the "Santos: Sacred Art of Colorado" exhibit at Regis' O'Sullivan Arts Center, November 1 - December 12, Jose Raul Esquibel is recognized as one of the most highly-respected artists in his field.

Recognition and high praise are certainly not new to Esquibel, however, as he was awarded the 1997 Heritage Award from the Colorado Council on the Arts. The Heritage Award honors extraordinary master folk artists with the goal of helping them pass on their wisdom to the next generation. Recipients are recommended for the award based on the excellence of their work, the traditionality of their art form and their idea for passing on their skill and wisdom.

Esquibel, a member of the class of 1965, is the only Regis alumnus featured in the Santos exhibit. He has a bachelor's degree in history from Regis and a master's degree in Latin American studies from Georgetown University (1972). Esquibel is primarily self-taught as a santero whose artwork can be seen in many churches and monasteries in Colorado and New Mexico. It could even be said that Esquibel's work has gone international, as a retablo (a carved and painted wooden panel) crafted by Esquibel was given as a gift from the Archdiocese of Denver to the Archdiocese of Paris, France.

Esquibel views his santos as not only works of art, but teaching tools. Through lectures and slide presentations, Esquibel educates people about santeros and santos and their use as cultural and devotional expressions.

of whom is, in his own sphere of influence, the most powerful man in the world."

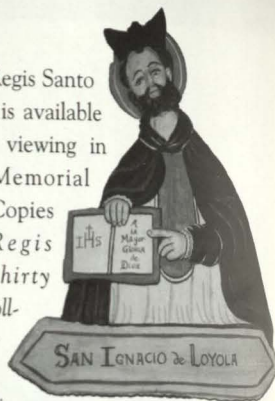

A videotape of the presentation was sent to each santero. Fr. Steele relates, "Alcario was so pleased by our giving his bulto (statue) to the Holy Father that he offered to make its replacement for the price of the original. And he also told me how he and his mother watched the copy of the videotape, and, as the presentation played itself out, fell into one another's arms weeping for sheer joy."

According to Fr. Steele, there are approximately 170 New Mexican santero subjects. His goal for the Regis collection was to have as broad a representation as possible. In addition to wood icons, Steele also located works by master tinsmiths and coppersmiths dating back to the mid-1700s. One issue, he notes, is the reverence for the subject rather than the medium, and many santos are created out of scrap lumber or discarded metals — carefully crafted so the material complements, without detracting from, the subject. Some 20th Century works are weavings or embroidery.

The Regis Santo Collection is available for public viewing in Dayton Memorial Library. Copies of The Regis Santos: Thirty Years of Collecting may be obtained by calling (505) 344-9382. For gallery hours, call (303) 458-4030.

In addition to his art displayed in the Santos exhibit, Esquibel's work can be seen as part of the permanent collection in Regis' Dayton Memorial Library. He was also one of the artists selected for the inaugural "Object of Colorado" art exhibit at Denver International Airport.

"Santos: Sacred Art of Colorado" features over 150 creations from 17 Colorado artists. The works include depictions of saints, biblical scenes, crucifixes and more. The exhibit is an important way to reach back into Regis' past, while also providing a valuable cultural and religious teaching tool. "Regis was founded in New Mexico and traces its roots to the world of the santo," Fr. Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., said. "It is important our students have a firsthand knowledge of the religious faith and the cultures of the people of the southwest."

The exhibit is open to the public and there is no admission fee. Gallery hours are 11:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 6:00 - 9:00 p.m. on Wednesdays. For more information, call (303) 458-4287.

a 10-day tour of central Italy, is available to Regis and Loretto Heights alumni. Offered in conjunction with course listing FAC 300, the tour will provide an informal, educational experience of Italian art and architecture while enjoying the eating style of Tuscany and Umbria. Set for May 11-21, 1998, the $2600 tour (course enrollment not required) includes: round-trip airfare from Denver, 8 night's accommodations in 3-4 star hotels (double room occupancy) in Rome and Florence, admission to selected museums, sights and activities, walking tours led by hosts Richard Stephenson, Chairman, Fine Arts Department, and Joe Giacalone, Director, Life Directions Wellness Program, selected sight-seeing with professional, local guides, and transportation between cities. Registration deadline is February 15, 1998. For more information, call (303) 458-4184.

Archbishop Charles J. Chaput, O.F.M. Cap., celebrated the Mass of the Holy Spirit at Regis on Thursday, September 18, 1997. University President Fr. Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., and Regis' newly installed rector, Fr. Richard Dunphy, S.J., were concelebrants. The Mass of the Holy Spirit is the traditional celebration signaling the formal opening of the academic year at Catholic colleges and universities. Approximately 400 Regis students, faculty and staff members were present. A picnic for all participants followed the Mass.

Athletic Hall of Fame Induction

Saturday, February 7, 1998

Regis University will induct its second Athletic Hall of Fame class on Saturday, February 7, 1998, at a ceremony in the Regis Student Center Dining Room. The Inaugural Hall of Fame ceremony last year saw seven individuals and one team honored.

Everyone is invited to attend this year's luncheon, which will be followed by a men's and women's basketball doubleheader with Colorado School of Mines. The induction ceremony begins at noon. The women's basketball game is at 5:30 p.m., and the men's contest begins at 7:30 p.m.

Cost of the luncheon is $25 per person, which includes tickets to the basketball doubleheader. Please complete the reservation form below and return to Barbara Schroeder, Director of Athletics, by January 21, 1998.

When Candace Berardinelli, Associate Professor, Department of Nursing, School for Health Care Professions at Regis University, chose a topic for her doctoral dissertation, she chose close to her heart. For years she has, as a nurse practitioner, volunteered her time and health care skills in urban clinics, as well as the Denver Indian Health and Family Services Center (DIHFS).

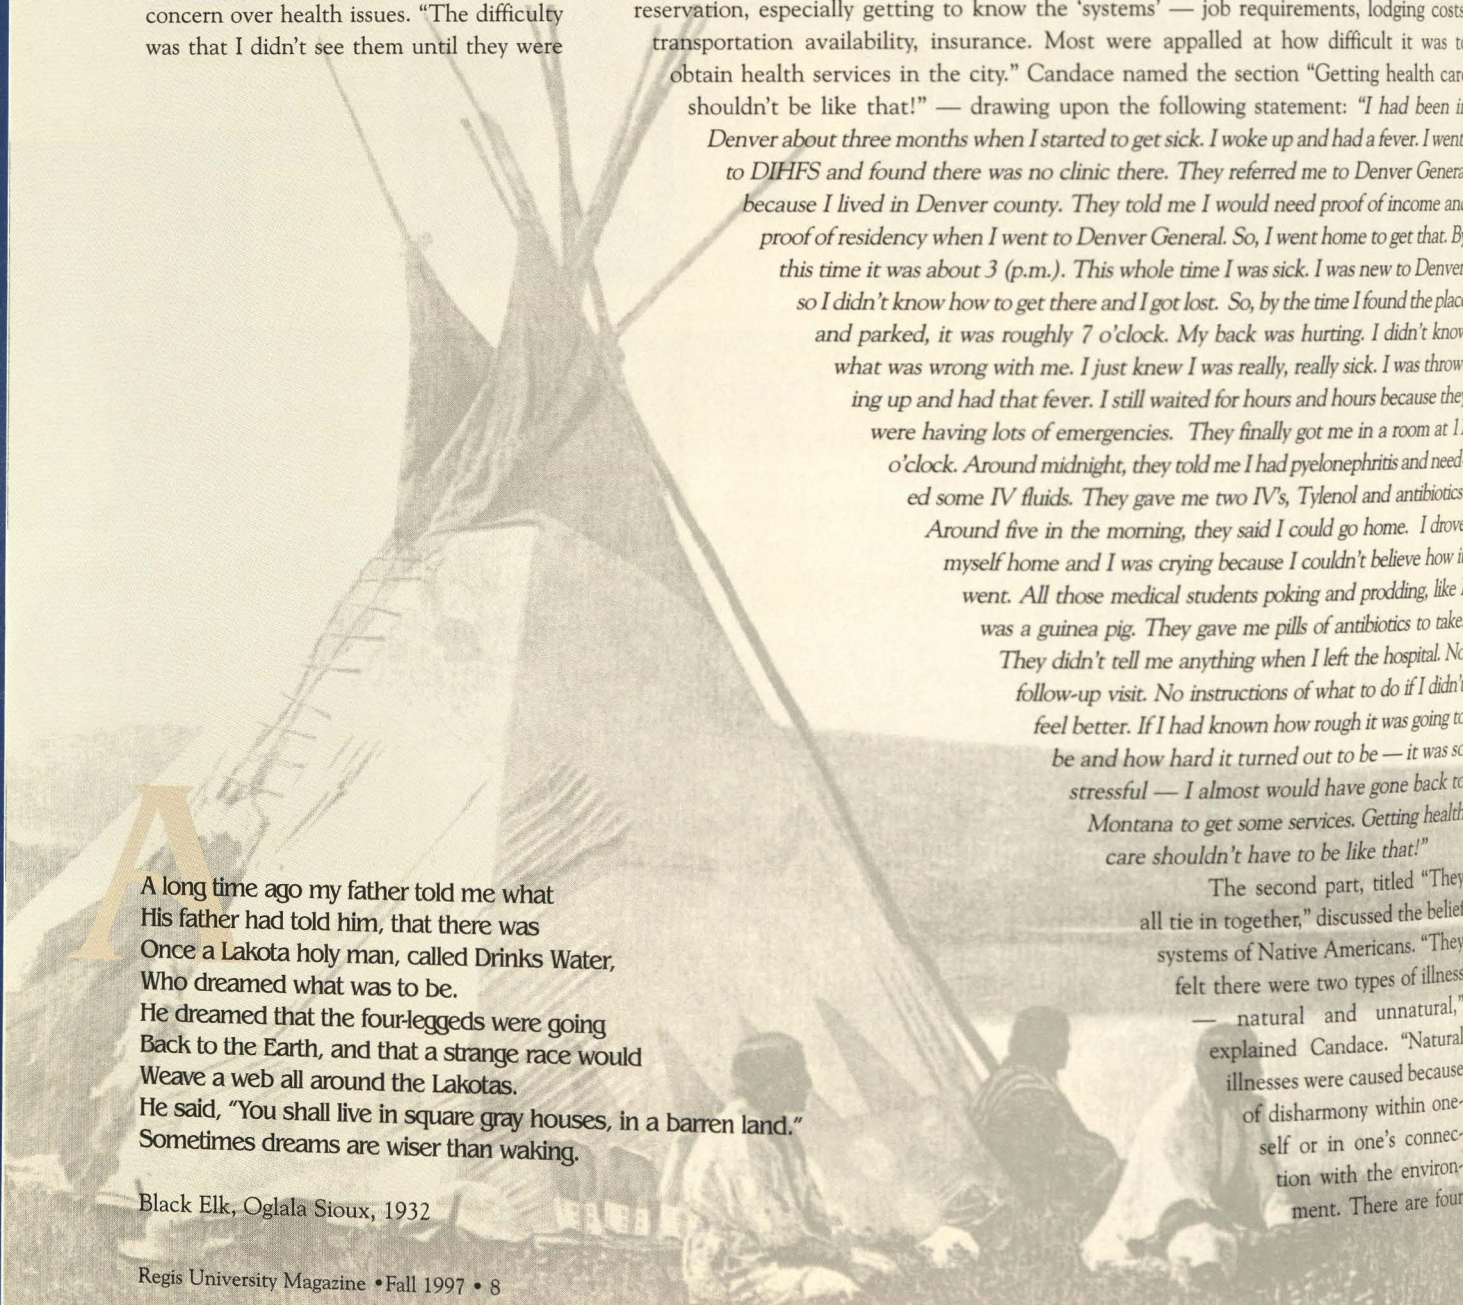

Her interest in the Native American culture was a natural outgrowth, as well as concern over health issues. "The difficulty was that I didn't see them until they were very ill. This piqued my interest. Where did they come from? Why did they wait so long to seek medical assistance? Their government health care benefits were lost when they left the reservation. When they came to the city, they only had their tribal ID — no social security card, no birth certificate and no driver's license. They had none of the information needed to get insurance."

Candace determined those issues would be the basis of her dissertation. "I conducted a series of interviews, simply asking people to tell me about their health care experiences since moving to Denver. It was really important for me to do this in a story-telling format, as that is the basis of the Indian culture. Tribal history has been passed down, generation to generation, through the telling of stories." She titled the resulting 330-page, five-pound document, "The Health Care Experiences and Health Seeking Patterns of Native Americans in an Urban Environment."

"The first part had to do with the changes Native Americans faced once they left the reservation, especially getting to know the 'systems' — job requirements, lodging costs, transportation availability, insurance. Most were appalled at how difficult it was to obtain health services in the city." Candace named the section "Getting health care shouldn't be like that!" — drawing upon the following statement: "I had been in Denver about three months when I started to get sick. I woke up and had a fever. I went to DIHFS and found there was no clinic there. They referred me to Denver General because I lived in Denver county. They told me I would need proof of income and proof of residency when I went to Denver General. So, I went home to get that. By this time it was about 3 (p.m.). This whole time I was sick. I was new to Denver, so I didn't know how to get there and I got lost. So, by the time I found the place and parked, it was roughly 7 o'clock. My back was hurting. I didn't know what was wrong with me. I just knew I was really, really sick. I was throwing up and had that fever. I still waited for hours and hours because they were having lots of emergencies. They finally got me in a room at 11 o'clock. Around midnight, they told me I had pyelonephritis and needed some IV fluids. They gave me two IV's, Tylenol and antibiotics. Around five in the morning, they said I could go home. I drove myself home and I was crying because I couldn't believe how it went. All those medical students poking and prodding, like I was a guinea pig. They gave me pills of antibiotics to take. They didn't tell me anything when I left the hospital. No follow-up visit. No instructions of what to do if I didn't feel better. If I had known how rough it was going to be and how hard it turned out to be — it was so stressful — I almost would have gone back to Montana to get some services. Getting health care shouldn't have to be like that!"

The second part, titled "They all tie in together," discussed the belief systems of Native Americans. "They felt there were two types of illness — natural and unnatural," explained Candace. "Natural illnesses were caused because of disharmony within oneself or in one's connection with the environment. There are four elements (physical, emotional, mental and spiritual) which must be in harmony with the individual, and then the person must also be in harmony with nature. Obviously moving to the city brings changes, and creates an imbalance for those used to living on the reservation."

She continued, "All of the participants, regardless of tribe, referred to being in harmony as being healthy. Some of the Sioux and Crow participants viewed this balance as a circle of life or Medicine Wheel. One stated, 'It's (health) all one circle, and if one aspect is out of sync, these other three are going to be out. People need to be whole. Like the circle, our Mother Earth is the mother who helps us appreciate what we're here for. And I think that's what keeps people going ... even when it may be difficult.' Another said, 'I think they all tie in together — all parts of the circle. Our beliefs about health and sickness are closely connected with our spiritual beliefs. You must have to live your life in a good way.'"

One compared her urban diet to a reservation diet. "I know my grandparents (on the reservation) always encouraged me to eat right — to eat lots of fresh game and vegetables. That's before I came down here (to Denver) and did all this junk food. The tradition has changed a lot since I moved into the inner cities. Junk food is everywhere — lots of sugar, lots of French fries. Our kids don't eat right because I don't eat right. So, we are not healthy."

"The other types of illnesses were attributed to supernatural evils," said

Candace. "These evils came in many forms. One tribe believed in witches and another saw the devil as Pan (half deer, half man, with cloven hooves). We cannot group Native Americans into one set of beliefs. Each tribe had its own, and each tribe was very aware of differences in what they believed. Superstitions played a major role throughout the various beliefs, and the idea of a supernatural evil was very real."

The dissertation detailed an interview with Sue, a Lakota. "My brother, he was sick. He got mixed up with this woman and she did witchcraft on him. He just went crazy. He shaved his head and acted crazy. And if you knew my brother, you'd think 'My God, that's weird.' He's always so sure of himself. And he did a total 180-degree turn. He ended up stabbing himself in the chest with a butcher knife. They say that woman was in her basement with her family doing witchcraft ... He was real bad. We went in there (intensive care unit) and his eyes were just dead. I was looking down on him and he was just staring. His eyes looked black. And I said 'Oh God, he's not going to live.' But they (medicine men) prayed for him. They held two sweats (purification ceremonies) for him. He came out of it. We Sioux don't believe in (doing witchcraft). See, we live in the circle. If you live in the circle and you throw something in the circle and it goes around, where's it going to? It's going right back at you, and it's going to hit you. We believe you do good things and good things will come back at you."

Candace noted that, along with the long-held superstitions regarding good and evil, her respondents also held Christian beliefs. "The Native Americans have strong ties to the Jesuits who converted many of them to Catholicism," she explained. "They say Jesus was the first medicine man. I definitely found they really do blend Catholicism with their Native American beliefs," referring to the Kateri Indian Catholic Church in Denver, which got its name from the Iroquois Indian maiden, Kateri Tekakwitha. Candace said efforts were underway to canonize Kateri as the first Native American saint.

The third section of Candace's exploration was called "We are a proud people." Over and over she encountered the sense of embarrassment people felt when they were sick. "It was as though they lost their strength when they lost their health," she explained. "It made them feel 'small,' so they chose not to seek treatment. They didn't want to appear stupid in front of a white person. This would explain why they were SO sick when I would finally see them in the clinic."

"I've got friends who said they were afraid to go to the clinic. They say they wouldn't know what to say — how to explain it. They're embarrassed to ask questions."

"A lot of Indian people don't want to appear ignorant, so they don't ask. They're embarrassed to ask."

"I remember thinking, 'That lady's white. I'm not going to ask her anything.' It's not racial. It's just that we (Indians) think any question we ask is stupid."

"It's a funny thing with Indians. Nobody will come right out and say they're prejudiced against Indians. But you get that feeling. Nobody ever puts it in words. You come to live with it. They look at your chart. They see you marked down you're a Native American. One of the first questions they ask you is, 'How much do you drink?' You know, it's stereotyping. When you answer that you don't drink, they say, 'Re-e-eally?'"

The final portion of the document presented Candace's observations and analysis. "The underlying theme tying this all together is 'transition.' When Native Americans move from the reservation into Denver, or other urban areas, they experience transition in three major areas: context, culture and health care."

Candace Berardinelli, Associate Professor, Department of Nursing.

CONTEXT: "When I talked about 'context,' I'm referring to environmental changes — from reservation to urban," explained Candace, "to transitions in the social context — developing new ties; to transitions in the family context — separations; and to transitions in the economic context. Now they have to explore the options available in the city."

CULTURE: Cultural transitions vary according to tribe, Candace emphasized. "The various spiritual beliefs are expressed in different ways. Tribes are very protective of them, as they help them retain their tribal identity." Language was equally important. It's integral to the culture. Mary, a 27-year-old Crow, stated, "Crow is my first language. I didn't speak English until I was five-years-old and learned it for pre-school. Since we're in the city and there's no one else to speak (Crow) with, I speak English. But when I see a person from my tribe, we always speak our language."

HEALTH CARE: "When they lost the health services offered on the reservation, they had to find other ways to obtain them," stated Candace. "There was such a lack of knowledge. And then, they would usually wait until they were so sick that they ended up in an emergency room, which would be chaotic, noisy and intimidating. Consequently, most delayed seeking help until they were very very ill — and even then they would often drive back to the reservation (Montana, Wyoming, etc.), rather than seeking help in Denver."

I am purified and free.
And I will not allow you to ignore me.
I have brought you a gift.
It is all I have but it is yours.
You may reach out and enfold it.
It is only the strength in the caress of a gentle breeze,
But it will carry you to meet the eagle in the sky.
My name is "I am living." I am here.
My name is "I am living." I am here.

Anna Lee Walters, Pawnee-Otoe

So, what happens now?

Candace will be defending her dissertation in late November, 1997. Following that, Dr. Candace Berardinelli will join a committee comprised of Native American leaders in Colorado to focus on ways to meet the health care problems addressed in her research. "I'm obviously immersed in the health care issues the Native Americans face, and plan to continue to volunteer and work in the community. I also hope to present my findings to policy makers so they might effect change in the delivery of health care to Native Americans."

REGIS UNIVERSITY

Dear Alumni and Friends:

Our 1996-97 fiscal year opened and closed on a common theme -- the renovation of Dayton Memorial Library. As we began the year, the south end of the Boettcher Commons became a source of amazement when 30-year-old Dayton Memorial Library was cleared of books, had holes punched in the walls, and its top popped. We watched as a fourth floor took shape, a new entrance emerged, and the cream colored bricks were transformed to match the red brick on the rest of the campus.

This $5 million fund raising program has provided our students, faculty, staff, and the community of northwest Denver with a state-of-the-art library facility. The completion of the library project triggered the final phase of our perimeter beautification project, which enhanced our campus aesthetics and security.

As we consider the impact of these projects on Regis' ability to foster a high quality academic environment, we are thankful for the sacrifices of so many alumni and friends who helped make them possible. Six hundred and fifty-nine donors to the University made these projects happen. We thank you all.

Although the library and perimeter captured a good deal of our attention during the year, there were a number of other highlights as well.

Rigoberta Menchú Tum, the 1992 Nobel Peace Prize winner from Guatemala, spent three days on campus in September. Her visit drew a large crowd of alumni, faculty, and students for an address in the Coors Life Directions Center; she spent considerable time with high school students and Regis students during the visit. This was the second visit by a Nobel Peace Laureate to Regis.

Sports Illustrated and NBC Nightly News carried stories about basketball coach Lonnie Porter's ability to win basketball games, graduate his players, and involve his team in community service. U.S. News and World Report again placed Regis in its Top Tier ranking of colleges and universities in the Western United States.

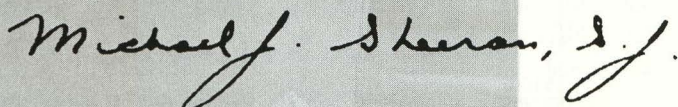

It continues to be gratifying to see the number of schools interested in the high quality adult programs our School for Professional Studies has developed. Eighteen colleges and universities nationwide have become partner schools. We work with these partner schools to assist them in developing the type of adult programs for which Regis has become nationally recognized.

The School for Health Care Professions continues to gain recognition. Shirl Wills, a nursing student, was one of 52 students nationally to be named a Fuld Fellow by the Helene Fuld Health Trust. These fellowships were created in 1996 and are devoted exclusively to excellence in nursing education. The School for Health Care Professions' outreach -- support of neighborhood health clinics, providing athletic physicals for high school students who could not afford them, and sponsorship of a Channel 9Health Fair site -- are making a significant impact in our community.

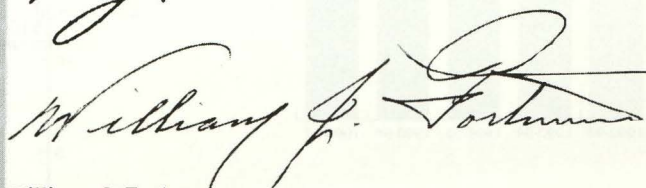

Our financial position ended positively as we completed our 24th straight year with a balanced operating budget. The graphs and consolidated statement included in this report will provide the highlights.

We continue to be grateful for the support of our alumni and friends. Regis' impact on students and the community would not be possible without your assistance.

Sincerely,

Michael J. Sheeran, S.J.

Irish Connection

Five students from Mary Immaculate College in Limerick, Ireland, and three students from Magee College in Derry, Ireland, spent the spring semester at Regis as part of an exchange program organized by Regis' Office of Experiential Education. Designed to analyze the issues dividing northern and southern Ireland, the program brought students from each area to Regis to learn not only about America, but also about their own country from an outside perspective. The Regis exchange program with Mary Immaculate College has existed for three years with the inclusion of the Magee College students (from Northern Ireland) beginning in the 1996-1997 school year.

Regent of Regis, Tom Tracy, '61, awarded full scholarships to three Northern Ireland students to study peace and conflict at Regis.

Athletic Hall of Fame

The inaugural class of Regis University Athletic Hall of Fame members was inducted in February. The inductees were as follows: Arnie Herber (football, late 1920s), the 1948-1949 basketball team, Dennis Boone (basketball, 1960), Larry Varnell (basketball coach, 1946-1950), Bill Newland (football and baseball, 1940s), Clarence Kellogg (coach/administrator), Waverly Dodrill (women's basketball, 1980s) and Irene Arguelles (volleyball, early 1990s).

Rigoberta Menchú Tum

Faculty, staff, students and alumni attended a special engagement with visiting Nobel Laureate Rigoberta Menchú Tum. In recognition of her work for social justice and ethno-cultural reconciliation based on respect for the rights of indigenous peoples, Tum was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1992. Fr. Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., bestowed Tum with an Honorary Doctorate of Public Service during her visit to Regis. Tum was present at Regis as part of the PeaceJam Conference, a program designed to educate and inspire high school students in methods of service and peacemaking.

Arboretum Status

With over 180 varieties of trees populating the Lowell campus, Regis University was granted arboretum status by the American Association of Botanical Gardens and Arboreta. Regis' trees include the largest in the state in four species: Saucer Magnolia, Weeping American Elm, Weeping European Beech and Sawtooth Oak.

Chester Alter Visiting Professor

Dr. Catherine McNamee, CSJ.

Dr. Catherine McNamee, CSJ, was named the Chester Alter Visiting Professor for the 1996-1997 academic year. Sr. Catherine presented a lecture on "The Catholic University in the 21st Century" to Regis faculty, staff and students during one of two visits to the University during the academic year. The Chester Alter Visiting Professorship is a continuing legacy of the Regis University-Loretto Heights College affiliation. Established in 1981 in honor of Chester Alter, former chancellor of the University of Denver and member of the Board of Trustees for Loretto Heights, the professorship endowment is used to bring leaders in the arts, humanities, sciences or business to the University and the Denver-area community.

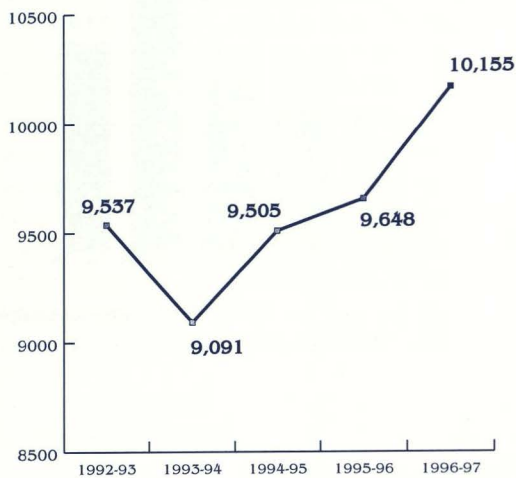

Colorado Trust Fellows

Twelve students were named as Colorado Trust Fellows and awarded funds for tuition, books and supplies to participate in the Master of Nonprofit Management program, School for Professional Studies. The Colorado trust is a private foundation dedicated to the health and well being of the people of Colorado. The Trust has two goal areas: accessible and affordable health care programs and the strengthening of families.

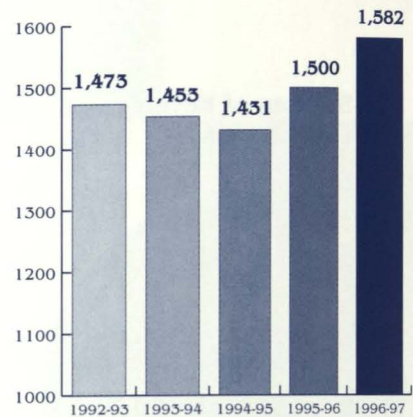

Top Tier Ranking

For the second consecutive year, Regis was ranked as one of 28 schools in the Top Tier of Western Colleges and Universities in U.S. News & World Report's guide to America's Best Colleges. Regis' School for Professional Studies was highlighted in the guide under the category of "Schools That March to the Beat of a Different Drummer."

Degrees Awarded

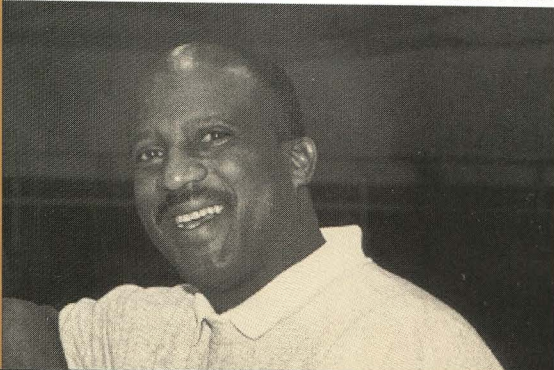

Physical Therapy Accreditation

Regis' Physical Therapy Department, School for Health Care Professions, was granted full accreditation by the Commission on Accreditation of the American Physical Therapy Association. The first group of students in the program, which began in 1994, graduated in December of 1996. Regis' program is one of only two programs in the state to be fully accredited.

National Recognition

Both Sports Illustrated and NBC Nightly News profiled Lonnie Porter, head coach of the Regis men's basketball team. The focus of the stories was Porter's 95 percent graduation rate among his players and his commitment to directing his players into service in the community. Porter, who's coached at Regis since 1977, requires each of his players to complete 16 hours of community service each year. Much of that service time is spent in tutoring programs at Denver's Skinner Middle School.

Library Renovation

Dayton Memorial Library reopened for use after a $5 million renovation on March 31, 1997, with a ribbon cutting and a reception for the Regis community. Secondary work was still being completed while the library was open to students through the end of the 1996-1997 school year and subsequent summer. The official grand rededication of the completed library was in October of 1997. The renovation of the library included demolishing, redesigning and rebuilding the entire interior of the building as well as "raising the roof" to add a fourth story. Other additions included over 300 study carrels (each equipped with Internet access ports), a clock window overlooking the campus, display galleries for permanent collections and a study room surrounded on three sides with stained glass windows in honor of St. Jude. During the 11-month reconstruction phase, a temporary library located three miles from campus served the students' academic needs.

University Celebrates Namesake's Birthday

Regis University celebrated the 400th anniversary of St. Jean-Francois Regis on January 31, 1997. A special "birthday Mass" was celebrated in the chapel and cake and coffee were shared in Main Hall in honor of the University's namesake.

MBA's From a Distance

Regis continues to offer and expand its External MBA program in conjunction with Bisk Publishing Company of Tampa, Fla. The External MBA program allows students across the nation the opportunity to earn a degree from Regis through video and Internet curriculum. Since its inception in June of 1996, the program was designed to offer every student maximum flexibility without sacrificing any of the instructional quality which has always been a hallmark of the Regis educational experience.

National Champions Marcus Paroske and Danial Nelson.

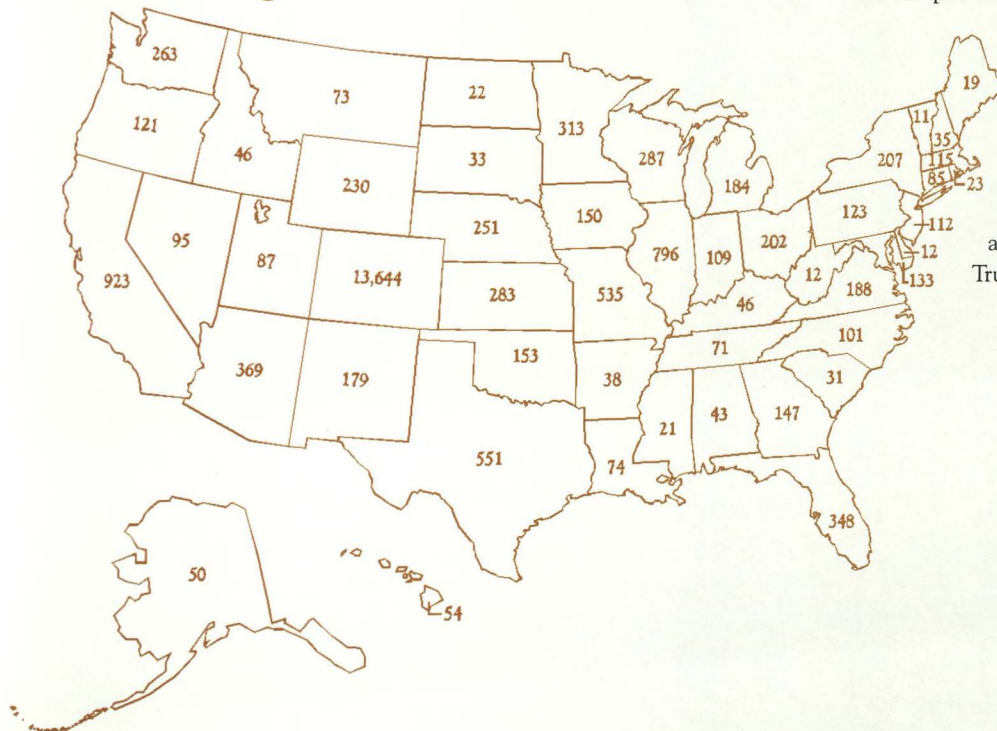

Forensic Team Earns Top Honors

The Regis University team of Marcus Paroske and Danial Nelson finished the parliamentary debate season in grand style, taking home the national championship title in March of 1997. The Regis team defeated debaters from Rice University in the final round of the national championships to earn Regis' second national title in parliamentary debate. Regis also captured top honors in 1993 when Paroske was, as a freshman, part of the winning duo. With the win, Regis became the only school to be twice named national parliamentary debate champions. In addition, the Regis Forensics Team won the Season's Sweepstakes, placing the entire group as #1 in the nation.

Colorado Springs Campus Move

In January of 1997, Regis University consolidated the two separate facilities in Colorado Springs, Colorado, into one site at the northern end of the city. The new Colorado Springs campus is just off Interstate 25 at the Woodmen exit and is clearly visible from the highway. The campus occupies nearly 28,000 square feet on the ground floor of Woodmen Corporate Center II. Fr. Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., President, William J. Husson, Ph.D., Academic Dean of the School for Professional Studies, Elizabeth L. Konarski, Associate Dean of SPS Academic Delivery Systems and Edward Beauvais, '58, Board of Trustees member, were all on-hand for the dedication of the new campus.

Dayton

Memorial

Library

Fritz Trask, vice president of the Boettcher Foundation, Laura K. McGrath, '78, Regis University Trustee, and her husband, Richard A. McGrath, '78. The Boettcher Foundation and the McGraths are major donors to the Dayton Memorial Library renovation project and the campus perimeter beautification project.

Fr. Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., presents Jack Hurley, '56, and Sylvia Hurley, LHC '58, with a miniature replica of the St. Jude stained glass window that graces the St. Jude Reading Room in the newly renovated library. The Hurley's made a $1 million gift to the library project in honor of St. Jude.

The Library

On April 26, 1996, Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., President of Regis University, David M. Clarke, S.J., Chancellor, and William J. Fortune, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, signaled the beginning of the library project by cutting a square out of the green carpet that dated to the opening of the University's first library building in 1966. Eleven months later, on March 31, 1997, Fr. Sheeran again took scissors, snipped the ceremonial ribbon, and welcomed the community back to the transformed library which is now "a state-of-the-art academic center for study, teaching, and scholarship."

All three levels of the building were renovated and a fourth floor added. The heating, cooling and lighting systems were completely replaced. The addition increased shelving capacity and brought together the individual collections that had been housed separately in an annex and in the Biology and Chemistry Departments.

The variety of study spaces expanded and now include tiered carrels, small group study rooms and faculty studies. Other enhancements include a fireplace lounge, a parent-child study suite, an enlarged research facility for the William E. Becker, S.J., Art History Slide Collection, and a climate-controlled space for special collections and archives. The Santo Collection Room and the St. Jude Reading Room, with its stained glass windows, convey a sense of transcendence and Catholic heritage.

The building now has the flexibility to accommodate the dramatic developments in computer and telecommunication technologies. It is one of the first university libraries in North America to provide a network port and electrical outlet at every student workstation, facilitating the use of laptop computers and connection to RegisNet and the Internet. An electronic classroom, media classroom and multi-media production lab were also added.

The exterior of the building became a more stately complement to Main Hall. It was capped with a pitched roof and large windows were cut into the exterior walls. A new entrance was created and the blond brick stained to match the maroon brick of adjacent buildings.

The University ensured that full library services were provided during construction, including open stack access to the circulating collections which were housed in an off-campus annex. The library is the information service hub for all Regis students and faculty.

The project was managed by a library renovation planning committee that included Andrew Scrimgeour, Andrew Dorfman, Richard Hansen, Steve Jacobs, Joanne Karpinski, Kathleen Lance, Janet Lee, Lennis Pederson, Susan Potter and Christopher McKee (library building consultant).

Frank P. Maggio, '60, and his wife, Pamela, traveled from Rockford, Illinois for the rededication of Dayton Memorial Library.

School for Professional Studies

in the 21st Century

In the last 10 years, the School for Professional Studies (SPS) has been recognized nationally as a school able to respond to a rapidly changing environment in higher education, while retaining a sense of tradition, mission and academic quality.

Ignatian education has always been open to the future, growing rapidly into new countries and cultures. Referencing the mission of Father Peter DeSmet into the western American territories, Fr. John Padberg, S.J., Director of the Institute of Jesuit Sources at St Louis University, states: "DeSmet would never have set out to begin with, if he had not been able to imagine something new, something beyond the accepted." (Heartland Conference, University of Loyola Chicago, May 1994).

In many ways, the 21st Century is new country and culture. A rapidly changing world is forcing new perspectives on learning, work, governance, values, human community, communication, international business and human ownership of global solutions. Across the University, new learning models are being developed to respond to the new challenges facing learners. SPS strives to respond to these changes while remaining faithful to the time-honored values of Jesuit education.

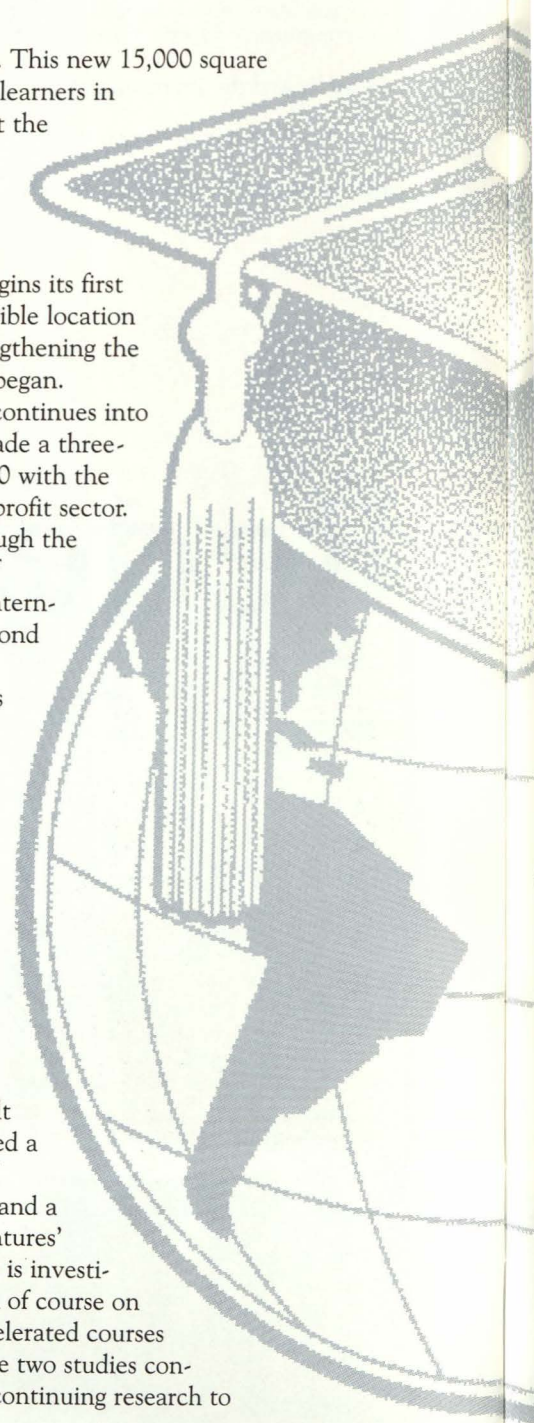

SPS has entered one of its most exciting academic years yet. On August 25, the new Ft. Collins campus opened to service the rapidly growing population of Northern Colorado. This new 15,000 square foot facility offers evening classes to adult learners in accelerated degree completion programs at the undergraduate and graduate levels. It is a full-service campus offering state-of-the-art computer labs, modern classrooms, bookstore and extension library service.

The new Colorado Springs campus begins its first full academic year. Standing in a highly visible location along I-25, this new campus is key to strengthening the Regis presence in the city where SPS first began.

The Colorado Trust Fellows program continues into its second year. The Colorado Trust has made a three-year commitment to Regis of over $800,000 with the goal of preparing future leaders of the nonprofit sector. The first class of 13 fellows is midway through the program of graduate study in the Master of NonProfit Management degree program, internships and leadership development. The second class of 12 fellows was selected from across Colorado and represents such organizations as: Alliance for National Renewal, the Governor's Responsible Fatherhood Initiative, the Archdiocese of Denver, Urban Children's Coalition, the Native American Multi-Cultural Education School and more.

The evaluation research of Dr. Raymond Wlodkowski, SPS Research Faculty, is prominent in this year's priorities for academic excellence. Joining the Academic Dean's staff in 1996, Dr. Wlodkowski has undertaken a longitudinal research project on the effectiveness of adult learning models. In 1996-1997, he conducted a study (Phase 1) to investigate the quality of undergraduate accelerated courses at Regis and a representative sample from among New Ventures' partner schools. In 1997-1998, (Phase 2) he is investigating the effects of time in class and length of course on student perceptions and learning, when accelerated courses are compared with traditional courses. These two studies contribute to the data base that can be part of continuing research to improve learning models such as accelerated courses, distance education and individually guided instruction. This research is vital to SPS in refining and developing its programs which currently serve approximately 8,000 adult students across the country.

SPS is proud of another Fulbright professor, the second in two years. This time the award has been granted to Jonathan Hochberg, an undergraduate distance learning faculty member. Hochberg will teach International Trade and Investment at ORT University in Montevideo, Uruguay.

Two SPS distance learning programs are literally "taking off" across the country. The School's first endeavor into the new mediated learning technologies began with the undergraduate Bachelor of Science in Business Administration degree completion program, launched in 1992 in partnership with Jones Education Company's College Connection (formerly Mind Extension University). Emerging from its initially slow start, the program has seen impressive growth each year, exceeding 4,500 credit hour enrollments in the 96-97 academic year. Faculty in this program report high satisfaction with student interaction and learning, and are helping the School re-think the way academic quality is achieved with students scattered across the country. William Nance, a graduate of this program and employee of Lockheed Martin in Jackson, Tennessee, traveled to Denver for the Winter 1996

Commencement in order to deliver one of two Commencement addresses. He spoke these words: "Because of the people of Regis, I can stand here today and honestly state that my way of seeing the world, and my way of judging my own actions and attitudes, have been profoundly and permanently affected by the Jesuit ideal of 'service to others'." Launching the External MBA in January, 1997, SPS has over 180 graduate students enrolled across the country. This program utilizes Regis MBA faculty teaching with state-of-the-art course materials, video, audio and Internet technology.

This dynamic degree, in partnership with Bisk Publishing Company of Tampa, Florida, continues to offer creative resources for new developments in the rapidly changing world of distance learning.

In September, the Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities was awarded a planning grant from the Department of Commerce National Telecommunications Administration (NTIA) to initiate plans to link participating Jesuit colleges and universities with telecommunications and internet course sharing.

The grant will also assist each institution in planning its local technology infrastructure for distance learning, workforce development and community outreach. SPS helped spearhead this process and will be an integral part of the planning endeavors. Other Jesuit institutions are joining SPS in exploring ways Ignatian education can continue time honored values through new learning formats.

The most challenging educational initiative lies with Western Governors University. Regis' SPS has been invited, as the only private university in the 15 western states-region to be asked, to be one of the pilot education providers for Western Governors University. Spearheaded by governors of 15 states, this initiative is unique in that it involves multiple states and institutions and its focus is on competency-based credentials rather than grades. Western Governors University will include non-traditional education providers such as corporations and will also collaborate in promoting international education in Britain, Japan and British Columbia.

SPS is increasingly being drawn into international opportunities. Jones Education Company's College Connection has invited the undergraduate distance learning program to join them in providing distance learning service to Hong Kong. An agreement has also been signed with Ateneo de Manila University, the premiere Jesuit University in the Philippines, for the purpose of developing accelerated intensive graduate programs in that institution similar to SPS models.

Only two years away, the 21st Century presents exciting, and sometimes daunting, challenges to Jesuit education. SPS joins Regis College and the School for Health Care Professions in being strongly positioned for a distinctive contribution to the future of learning.

Regis College

Students & Service "Great Kids"

Regis College welcomed approximately 1,000 students for the fall semester on Monday, August 25. According to Regis' Office of Admissions, 280 of those students were incoming freshmen.

Those numbers reflected what Penny Dempsey St. John, Regis College Director of Admissions, termed a "sizeable increase" in incoming freshman students over the 1996-1997 school year. According to Dempsey St. John, nearly 60 percent of the freshman class is from outside of Colorado, including representatives from 29 states and four foreign countries. Dempsey St. John said the number of in-state students is virtually equal to last year's freshman class, but the out-of-state numbers increased significantly.

The 1997-1998 freshman class is also one of quality students. Figures from the Office of Admissions show the class has a combined grade point average of 3.26, and an average score of 23 on the ACT test. Fifty-seven percent of the class attended public high schools, with the remaining 43 percent coming from private high schools.

Incoming freshmen were introduced to Regis' mission of "service to others" through an afternoon of community assistance. This year's Freshman Service Day was Saturday, September 6, 1997. The students took part in various community improvement projects in Northwest Denver, such as graffiti removal, yard work, trash collection, construction, general maintenance and painting. The students' work sites included, among others, the Samaritan House Shelter, Mount Saint Vincent Home, Little Sisters of the Poor, Magdalene Damen House and the Denver Parks and Recreation Department.

Freshman Service Day is coordinated through Regis' Center for Service Learning. The Center for Service

Learning provides educational and outreach experiences for Regis students and instills the value of service to one's community as a lifelong pursuit.

Though performance of community service hours is not a requirement for graduation from Regis, it is an integral part of an undergraduate education at Regis and is experienced in a variety of methods. Regis is a recognized leader statewide and nationally as one of the first institutions to have a Service Learning office and tie service to its core curriculum.

Regis' Center for Service Learning kicked off the "Skinner's Great Kids" program in conjunction with Skinner Middle School this fall. In July, Regis was awarded a $30,000 grant from the City of Denver as part of the "1997 Great Kids Initiative" for the University's efforts to help educate Skinner students.

The city recognized Regis for its involvement in the "Skinner's Great Kids" literacy project, in which Regis students tutor and serve as mentors to Skinner students. This is the first year for the project, directed by Megan Mahoney, assistant coordinator in the Center for Service Learning at Regis.

According to Mahoney, 22 Regis students are involved in the program, tutoring 27 Skinner students at the Boys & Girls Club on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. Most of the Regis students are committed to attend the sessions one day per week. The program involves the Regis tutors working one-on-one with the younger students and, Mahoney said, the relationships formed have been very positive. Mahoney said the project is a great opportunity for students at both Regis and Skinner. "Obviously it benefits Skinner, because they face the same financial constraints all schools do, and their teachers can use all the help they can get," Mahoney said. "Plus, the program gives Regis students a chance to apply what they're learning in the classroom to actual situations, and then take their experiences back to the classroom." As director of the project, Mahoney recruited Regis students to be tutors, arranged orientation and trained the tutors, matched tutors with Skinner students, arranged field trips and is providing incentives and rewards for the students involved.

In an effort to uphold the Jesuit mission of "service to others," Regis is continuing a tradition of dedication to the community.

The goals of the "Skinner's Great Kids" program are lofty, but attainable, Mahoney said, explaining that through the after-school-tutoring program, the hope is to advance reading skills two grade levels in one academic year. One unstated goal of the project, Mahoney added, is to instill in the Regis students the value of learning through serving others. "Once this 'bug' of being able to go out and learn from service work hits them, they are going to be able to continue doing it the rest of their lives," she said. In addition, the program exposes Regis students to different cultures and lifestyles than they may be accustomed to. "Going to Skinner really enhances how they grow up and develop. Skinner shows them the 'real world' up close," Mahoney said. Though the "Skinner's Great Kids" program is a new venture, it is by no means Regis' first contact with Skinner in a service manner. Lonnie Porter, head coach of Regis' men's basketball team, has been sending his players to Skinner as tutors for several years, and Regis has a well-established teacher assistant program at the school. "This is another program we can introduce to keep our relationship strong with Skinner and the community," Mahoney said.

Four business majors volunteer during Freshmen Service Day to help start a micro-business at Guardian Angels Grade School. Mike Goodman, Bellingham, Washington; Ian Currigan, Westminster, Colorado; Ian Ferguson, Bellingham, Washington; Guardian Angels' Athletic Director Diane Vollmer and her daughter; along with Lori Holmes, Aurora, Colorado, work together to build a concession stand to help raise funds for the school's two-year-old sports program.
