Regis to build new student residence

Ground has been broken for construction of a new state-of-the-art student residence east of O'Connell Hall on the Lowell campus of Regis University. It is expected to house 184 students when it opens, scheduled for fall 2002. The plan was approved by the University Board of Trustees at its June 24, 2001, meeting. Groundbreaking took place October 5, 2001, with members of the Board of Trustees, students, University leaders and others in attendance.

The residential facility is a combination of two-story townhouses and apartment "flats." Each of the primarily three-bedroom units will have 2½ baths, a living room and a fully appointed kitchen with dining area. High-speed Internet, cable and telephone connections will be in each bedroom. The facility also will have common area lounge space as well as centralized administration and mail.

A new parking area completed this summer to the north of the new residence hall and east of the Adult Learning Center will provide ample parking for all resident students in this facility as well as in O'Connell and DeSmet halls.

The need for a new student residence is driven by projected enrollment growth in Regis College.

Situating the new facility east of O'Connell allows the University to phase in a residential village in the center of campus. The master plan also provides space for the construction of another residence hall, which would replace West Hall, south of this first new facility, and east of O'Connell and DeSmet. A landscaped quadrangle, which will serve to bring residents of all four halls together, is planned for development within the residential village.

This residential village concept places housing in the middle of the campus property, near academic and support facilities, while at the same time pushing it to the edge of the built portion of the campus.

This project marks the beginning of implementation of the Lowell Campus Master Plan, which was approved by the Board of Trustees in January 2001. The master plan is the product of the Forum on the Future of Regis University and the Physical Plant Committee of the Board working in collaboration with external consultants, an internal planning team and the University community at large. The plan synthesizes the best thinking of this broad group of advisors regarding the needs for development of the Lowell campus for the next quarter century.

James Joyce finds place at Regis University

Irish writer James Joyce is the new man on campus at Regis University, thanks to a sculpture created by renowned Irish artist Rowan Gillespie and given to the University by Board of Trustees Chair Martin T. Hart, '57.

Hart commissioned Gillespie to create "Ripples of Ulysses, a Sculptural Tribute to James Joyce," which was dedicated during a ceremony on July 14, 2001, during the University's annual Alumni Weekend.

The large sculpture has a permanent home on the lawn behind the Coors Life Directions Center on the Lowell campus.

The sculpture features a life-size Joyce wearing his signature hat, glasses and cane, standing on a large circular pedestal made of panels carved with phrases from "Ulysses," his best-known book. Water trickles down channels in the sloping pedestal to an outer ring, creating a lyrical look and sound inspired by Joyce's groundbreaking writing style, called stream of consciousness.

"That gave me the idea of having a bit of a stream, a trickle," explained Gillespie, who attended the dedication ceremony.

The ceremony had, appropriately enough, an Irish feel. Bagpiper Brian Turner of Denver, in full kilt, led worshippers from a Mass that was part of Alumni Weekend to the ceremony across campus.

Performers surprised the crowd by appearing in the roles of Joyce and a few of his best-known characters, including Stephen Daedalus, Molly Bloom, Leopold Bloom and Buck Mulligan.

Dennis Gallagher, '61, assistant professor in the Department of Communication, served as master of ceremony, and joined professor Victoria McCabe, director of the Freshman Commitment Program, in giving readings of Joyce's writing.

"The sculpture will give us a little bit of a flair on campus and add to our ambience," Hart said. "I think it's going to be delightful."

James Joyce is closely linked to Regis University through Father Robert Boyle, S.J., who from 1955 to 1968 taught in the English department, and served as its chair part of that time. Boyle introduced the writings of James Joyce to a generation of Regis students, including Hart, who is now president of Martin T. Hart Investments.

"Bob Boyle was the reason for our great love of James Joyce here at Regis," said Father Ed Maginnis, S.J., alumni chaplain and former professor of theology at Regis, and a close friend of Boyle.

"He was just a superb communicator and an absolute master of the English language," Maginnis said. "He just gloried in it."

Simplicity and clarity in writing and speech were hallmarks of Boyle's style. For example, when he first arrived on campus, the freshman English class was called "Rhetoric and Composition." Boyle changed the title to "College Reading and Writing." Although very well educated himself -- he received a doctoral degree from Yale University -- Boyle fought pretentiousness in academic life.

"There was nothing pretentious about him at all. He had a first-class education and he used it well," Maginnis said.

One of Boyle's many strengths as a teacher was forcing students to learn, even if they thought they did not want to. His methods ranged from making them repeatedly look up words in the dictionary to making them laugh.

"He was simply an extraordinary teacher," Maginnis said.

Hart's classmate Dr. Thomas Staley, a member of the Board of Trustees at Regis and director of the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin, is now an internationally recognized Joyce expert. He is founding editor of the James Joyce Quarterly, which he edited for 26 years, and has written numerous books on Joyce and modern literature. Staley worked with Gillespie to select text for the sculpture.

Gillespie, who was born in Dublin in 1953, is most famous for his Famine series, commissioned to mark the 150th anniversary of the Irish potato famine and given to Ireland in 1997. The work stands on Custom House Quay in Dublin.

His sculptures are widely exhibited, including in Dublin, London, Amsterdam and Stockholm, as well as at the Irish Museum of Modern Art.

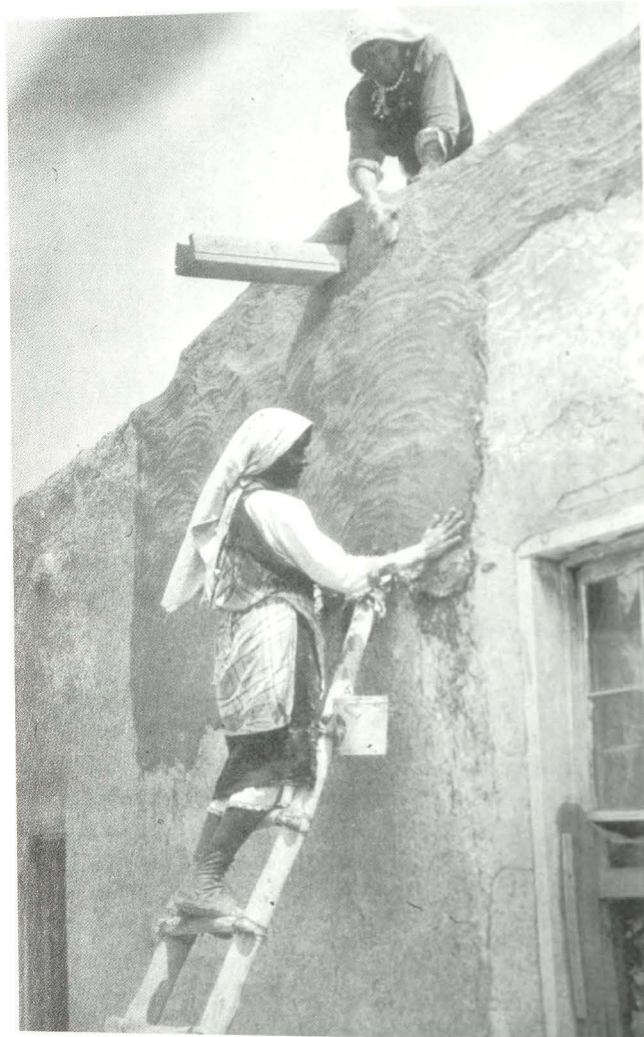

Joyce's books include "Dubliners," "Finnegans Wake" and "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man." He was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1882, and died in 1941 in Zurich, Switzerland. A novelist and short-story writer, his work revolutionized the form of the novel by abandoning ordinary plot development for stream of consciousness, or writing the way people think.

Vanished world springs to life in rare collection

Replastering a Paguete house, 1925.

An historical and artistic look at the disappearing world of traditional Native American life is now available at Regis University, thanks to a rare collection of leather-bound books and photogravures.

"The North American Indian," by prominent Seattle photographer Edward Sherrif Curtis, was purchased by alumnus Thomas J. Tracy, '61, through the Thomas J. Tracy Family Foundation, and is on permanent loan to Regis.

The 40-volume collection arrived in Denver from London in August and is housed in Dayton Memorial Library on the Lowell campus.

"It's simply wonderful that Tom should entrust us with such a helpful treasure," said Father Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., president of Regis University. "The collection gives the viewer a sense of Native American life which is so powerful that the years melt away and one is suddenly inside the world of Native Americans at the start of the last century. We're especially grateful to Tom and his foundation for honoring Regis University in this fashion."

Tracy first became interested in Native Americans during his years at Regis. He was especially inspired by what he learned of the missionary work of Father Pierre Jean DeSmet, S.J., who ministered to Indian tribes in the northern Rocky Mountain region during the mid-1800s.

"Regis is the right choice as the home for the collection because of the Jesuit tradition of working with Native Americans," Tracy said. "I'm glad I'm able to give back something to the University that gave so much to me. I believe this collection will be an invaluable resource for those interested in studying Native American life as well as for anyone simply interested in seeing rare treasures."

"The North American Indian" includes 20 volumes of text with photogravures and 20 accompanying portfolios of large-size photogravures. Originally, 500 copies of the work were to be produced, although most scholars believe only 272-291 were actually completed.

The volumes now at Regis are No. 4, and known as the prestigious King Set. The set was given to King Edward VII of England by J. Pierpont Morgan, and passed down to King George V, grandfather of the current Queen Elizabeth.

The early print number also increases the value to art enthusiasts.

"The crispness of the copper plates (used in the photogravure process) diminish with each print," said Regis archivist Elizabeth Happy. "To have the fourth is utterly remarkable."

Very few complete first-edition sets of "The North American Indian" exist today, making the collection even more valuable. Among others, the Library of Congress has a complete set, and the Western History Department at the Denver Public Library has a partial set.

The Thomas J. Tracy Family Foundation is providing special scanning and printing equipment to make high-end copies of the large-size folio prints. No more than five copies will be produced, with the first going to the Archdiocese of Denver's Vehr Library.

Denver's Archbishop Charles J. Chaput, O.F.M. Cap., himself part Prairie Band Potawatami, welcomed the copies as "an extraordinary gift." He praised the foundation for its devotion to "preserving the beauty, dignity and memory of the Native American past. This is an important collection, and we're very grateful for a copy of such unusually high quality."

Plans also are in the works to make a copy of the collection available in some way to the 27 other U.S. Jesuit colleges and universities, according to Regis Dean of Libraries Ivan Gaetz.

The Library of Congress calls Curtis "one of the most well-recognized and celebrated photographers of Native people." He documented 80 Native American tribes over a span of more than 30 years beginning about 1900. With financial backing from President Theodore Roosevelt, who wrote the introduction, and financier J.P. Morgan, Curtis published "The North American Indian."

"The Indian as he has hitherto been is on the point of passing away ... it would be a veritable calamity if a vivid and truthful record of these conditions were not kept," Roosevelt wrote in his introduction.

Documentation suggests Roosevelt personally autographed the introduction of the collection at Regis, although that is not yet verified, Gaetz said.

"The collection itself is a major contribution to the study of North American Indians," Gaetz said. "It's of historical significance visually, in the plates, and in the text."

Curtis made it his mission to, in his words, "form a comprehensive and permanent record of all the important tribes of the United States and Alaska that will retain to a considerable degree their ... customs and traditions." He took more than 40,000 photographs that preserve their cultural identities, about 22,000 of which appear in "The North American Indian." According to scholars, Curtis took voluminous field notes during his project and these notes are what were edited, printed and bound into the 20 volumes of text.

"Edward Curtis was this amazing photographer who went off and photographed the West," Happy said. "It's a photographic record of a world that's virtually vanished. The photogravures are simply amazing."

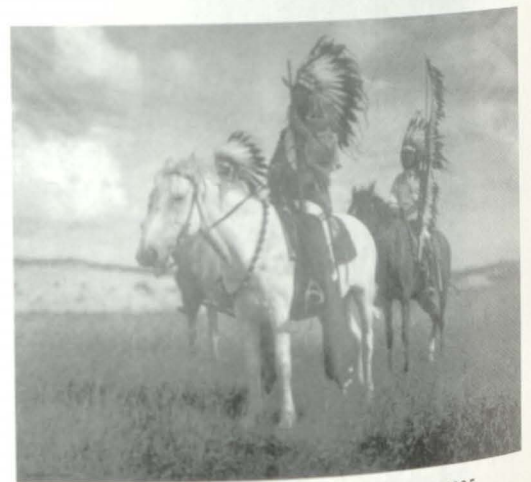

Curtis recorded special ceremonies as well as daily life. Among the pictures in the collection are portraits of tribal leaders and everyday people, as well as their homes, games, ceremonial dress, food preparation, transportation and scenery. The pictures and text are grouped primarily by tribe. For example, the first volume covers the Navajo, Apache and Jicarilla tribes.

Curtis wanted his documentation to be as artistic as it was scholarly, and it takes only one look at the volumes to realize how well he succeeded.

Photogravures "have the subtlety of a photograph and the art quality of a lithograph," according to The Curtis Collection, which owns the copper plates used to create the original Curtis photogravures.

The photogravure process involves making a glass transparency from a photographic negative. Then, through a chemical process, an etched copper plate of the original photographic image is created. That copper plate is then used with rich sepia ink and high-quality paper to produce the outstanding art seen in the collection.

A long-standing interest in the ethnography of the North American Indian led Tracy, president of Genuine Parts Distributors, to purchase the collection now at Regis.

Noatak Kayak were skin-covered, light and efficient craft, and of importance to the Eskimo, 1928.

“The rare opportunity to purchase this collection let him honor his interests and his connection to Regis,” Gaetz said.

Tracy has been recognized by several organizations for his extensive philanthropic work. He received an honorary degree of doctor of laws from the National University of Ireland in May 1999 for his work to promote peace in Northern Ireland.

The permanent loan of the collection is just the latest way Tracy has supported his alma mater since his 1961 graduation. Among other activities, he is a member of the Regents of Regis University.

The next step is finding an appropriate location within the library for the Curtis volumes, which are currently being stored in the archives.

“The Tracy Family Foundation is interested in providing a suitable home for this collection and perhaps other rare books and collections of Dayton Memorial Library,” Gaetz said, but exactly what form that will take has not been determined.

While the volumes are being cataloged, the collection can be viewed by appointment. Call 303-964-3612 to schedule an appointment.

SHCP offers physical therapy doctorate

The faculty and staff of the Physical Therapy Department of the School for Health Care Professions achieved a long-time dream when the doctor of physical therapy degree was approved -- the first doctoral degree for Regis University. But they didn't have much time to sit back and enjoy the achievement.

Final approval from the North Central Association, the regional accrediting agency for the University, came in mid-August 2001. Classes for the charter class of 32 students started August 27, 2001.

"The faculty has put so much energy in this move forward," said Barbara Tschoepe, director of the Physical Therapy Department. "We're looking to develop leaders who can lead the profession into what we want it to be in 20 years."

Of the approximately 200 schools nationwide that offer physical therapy programs, less than half are in the process of changing to a doctoral degree. Regis is one of the top 20 schools that have actually done it.

"This will give our graduates an edge," Tschoepe said. "They're going to be the change agents to move the profession in the direction we expect it to go."

SHCP previously offered a master's degree, which is being phased out and replaced by the doctoral degree. Both are entry-level professional degrees that let a person become a physical therapist, much like dentists receive a D.D.S., lawyers receive a J.D. and doctors receive an M.D. The program requires the student to have a baccalaureate degree before entering.

The need for doctorally prepared physical therapists comes about because the role and responsibility of the physical therapist continues to expand, Tschoepe said. "In part, it's because physical therapists have additional responsibilities in the health care environment, including a more diagnostic role."

According to the American Physical Therapy Association, today's physical therapists are "the experts in the examination and treatment of musculoskeletal and neuromuscular problems that affect people's abilities to move the way they want and function as well as they want in their daily lives."

The change from master's to doctoral degree primarily involves increasing the depth of the student's studies, rather than the breadth, according to Tschoepe.

The change will involve an increase in required semesters from six to eight and in total course hours from 82 to 110, as well as lengthened clinical internships, from 23 to 38 weeks.

Students will spend the extra time getting more in-depth training in many areas, including health care ethics, business management, pharmacology and a variety of physical therapy management courses such as neurological systems, cardio-pulmonary systems, muscular-skeletal systems and multi-systems.

"We will be expanding our faculty and staff to accommodate the additional students and additional time the students will be here," Tschoepe said.

Faculty numbers will increase from the current 11 to about 16 over the next four years, while the affiliate faculty also will increase from the current 25, and will provide additional clinical expertise.

"Health care is a changing environment and because of that we need to be visionary," Tschoepe said. "The doctor of physical therapy is our best opportunity to prepare graduates for what's to come."

SHCP takes nursing program to the workplace

Regis University's School for Health Care Professions is taking its bachelor of science in nursing program off campus and into the workplace.

Regis University, Community College of Denver, HealthONE Alliance and Presbyterian/St. Luke's Medical Center have formed an educational partnership to prepare baccalaureate-degree nurses, who are much needed in health care settings.

Thirty-six students are enrolled for the first class, which began September 4, 2001.

The Worksite BSN program is designed for people already working in health care professions who want to take the next step and become registered nurses, according to Barbara White, project coordinator and associate professor in the SHCP Department of Nursing.

"The program is for health care employees who cannot leave full-time employment to attend nursing school classes in the traditional format," White said.

It's different from other nursing programs offered by Regis because it allows the student to continue working. Traditional nursing courses take four years of full-time study to complete, and that leaves little time for working at a job, White explained.

Operating on a consolidated single class day schedule, all of the theory classes are offered one day a week, generally with two classes offered in consecutive four-hour blocks. The program is based on an adult-learner, accelerated model, with two eight-week sessions per semester.

In addition, the hospitals have agreed to schedule employees off work on class days and to arrange flexible clinical experiences that fit with their work schedules.

The hospitals are providing substantial financial support to help their employees pay tuition in exchange for a promise to continue to work in the facility as an RN upon graduation, White said.

HealthONE Alliance, a nonprofit organization, has awarded a grant of $62,800 for first-year implementation of the program, continuing a major commitment to fund initiatives which impact the recruitment and retention of nurses.

Community College of Denver will bring all of the required pre-nursing courses to the work site and offer basic assessment testing for students who have not previously attended college.

On the other end of the spectrum, Regis will employ alternative teaching methods to provide students with challenging classroom and laboratory learning. For example, a respiratory therapist who has advanced knowledge in pulmonary care will be able to demonstrate clinical competency and treatment rationale without having to sit through classes in basic nursing fundamentals.

This is one way that educational and health care institutions can partner and be proactive in meeting the critical need for more nurses. There's also a shortage of expert nursing faculty nationwide, White said. The program is addressing this shortage by developing new affiliate faculty members from the ranks of hospital staff who are interested in teaching and already have master's degrees. Initially, these "clinical scholars" will concentrate on the clinical aspects of the program.

Discussion about the worksite program began nine months ago when Becki Benoit, chief nursing officer at Presbyterian/St. Luke's Medical Center, approached Patricia Ladewig, academic dean of SHCP. The scope of the opportunity has since expanded to include three of the five hospitals in the HealthONE system.

Las Vegas campus marks second year

When the Las Vegas, Nevada, campus of Regis University opened its doors in late August 1999, 10 students were enrolled. Today, there are close to 200 students, and in June, the campus reached a milestone with the graduation of 12 students who would complete their degree requirements by the end of summer.

"When we opened in Las Vegas we were kind of unknown," said Charlotte Bentley, campus director. "It's been a wonderful, exciting opportunity to develop the awareness of Regis in Las Vegas."

Another milestone for the campus was the arrival of Father Charles Murphy, S.J., who joined the staff this fall. He came from Marquette University, and brings a Jesuit presence to the campus, Bentley said, in a variety of ways, including leading retreats.

Like other satellite campuses, the Las Vegas campus offers programs designed to help working adults achieve their career goals. The campus offers four graduate programs and three undergraduate programs, with a variety of degrees available in each program. Two post-baccalaureate licensure-only programs also are offered in elementary and secondary education.

About 60 percent of students are enrolled in undergraduate programs and 40 percent in graduate programs.

The master of education is one of the most popular degree programs.

"There's a tremendous teacher shortage in southern Nevada," Bentley said. She added that many people are turning to an advanced degree from Regis to be able to help meet that need.

"Las Vegas is experiencing tremendous growth," she added, and 1,500 to 1,700 new teachers are hired each fall. "We work very closely with the Clark County School District and the Nevada state department of education."

Las Vegas has long been known as a gambling and bright-lights tourism mecca, but the casino industry is not the largest supplier of students, Bentley said.

"Our students come from across the board." Many come from the banking world, large government contractors and the management level of the corporate entities of casinos. As Las Vegas leaders try to attract more high-tech businesses, Bentley said, the need for more computer classes on campus is growing.

After a slow start, Bentley said, the campus is on track, meeting or exceeding enrollment goals. The 10-classroom campus is in a new office complex, located near a brand-new beltway around the city and close to the airport.

"We're well-placed to grow with Las Vegas," Bentley said.

SPS helping Mozambique move forward

An African country torn apart by years of civil war and natural disasters is getting a much-needed boost from Regis University as it heads down a long road to economic development.

The University's School for Professional Studies is providing videotapes of business administration courses to the Catholic University of Mozambique. The library of videotapes includes course content for the bachelor of science in business administration and EMBA (online master's degree in business administration) programs. Bisk Publishing Company, Regis' partner in the EMBA, is participating in this gift as well.

The tapes arrived this summer in Mozambique, one of the poorest countries in the world.

The collaboration is the result of a year of discussion with Father Michael Schultheis, S.J., who serves as the economics faculty at the Catholic University of Mozambique.

He approached Regis, which is well-known for its distance learning programs, for help in developing courses because the African university is short of faculty available to develop curriculum.

"In the climate of current faculty shortages, the Regis videotapes will enhance the curriculum to better serve the growing number of students who want to study at the undergraduate and graduate levels," said Steve Jacobs, assistant dean in SPS.

Mozambique, in southern Africa, has very limited resources for higher education and a literacy rate of just 40 percent. It's estimated there are fewer than 50 Mozambicans who have doctoral degrees and only about twice that number with master's degrees from recognized universities. The country has a population of about 19 million people.

"The Catholic University of Mozambique opened its doors in August 1996 in the city of Beira with a mission to help meet the need for trained professionals in Mozambique and to decentralize the institutes of higher education which had been concentrated in the capital city of Maputo," Jacobs explained.

It graduated its first class with bachelor degrees in June 2000, and hopes that with the videotape courses from Regis, the school can create a core of graduates who can turn around and teach new students. The Catholic University of Mozambique also hopes to graduate students who will have the capacity to undertake needed research into public policy issues for the country.

"An educated workforce will depend on Mozambican institutions of higher learning having faculty to teach and students to be taught," Jacobs said.

In 1994, Mozambique was ranked one of the poorest countries in the world. It achieved its independence from Portugal in 1975, but it wasn't until a peace accord was signed in 1992 that the country was able to concentrate on rebuilding after a devastating civil war. Mozambique, twice the size of California, is bordered by Tanzania, Zambia, Malawi, Zimbabwe, Swaziland and South Africa.

"Regis University's School for Professional Studies is delighted to assist this school with hopes that future collaborations may develop," Jacobs said. "You feel this is what Jesuits are about at the core."

Building Character

Georgia and Walt Imhoff, '55

Philanthropy is at heart of Imhoff philosophy

Walter F. Imhoff has built success out of the education he received and the philosophy he learned at Regis University. The 1955 graduate truly is living what the Jesuit university strives to teach all of its students: being leaders in service of others.

"Walt gives of his time, his energy, his resources, and most importantly, his heart through numerous civic involvements," said Father Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., president of Regis University. "He does so by choice -- because it's important to his community and because giving back to his community is the right thing to do."

Imhoff is managing director of the premier investment bank in the Rocky Mountain region, Hanifen, Imhoff, A Division of Stifel, Nicolaus and Company Inc.

Imhoff, who received a bachelor of arts in business administration and a minor in accounting from Regis, said discovering investment banking as a career was "a stroke of luck."

In 1955, Coughlin and Company asked Regis accounting professor Father Joseph Ryan, S.J., to send three students to interview for a job to underwrite tax-free bonds, and Imhoff was selected.

"I didn't know anything about municipal bonds because my family didn't have money to invest," said Imhoff, "but I was lucky to find my career."

Five years after that unexpected beginning, he started his own investment banking company. Along with two partners, Imhoff founded Hanifen, Imhoff & Samford in 1960. In January 2000, the company merged with Stifel, Nicolaus, a New York Stock Exchange company, with Imhoff as managing director. He also serves on the Stifel, Nicolaus board of directors.

As successful as he is at his career, Imhoff also finds fulfillment in other areas of life. "Both my wife, Georgia, and I have a strong belief in giving back to the community," he said.

Imhoff, who was born in Denver on August 7, 1931, to Walter and Frances Imhoff, first learned that ideology from his mother. It was reinforced through his years at Regis.

"The Jesuits had a strong influence on my life," he said.

In Georgia, whom he married in 1973, Imhoff has found a woman who shares his passion for giving.

"I'm very fortunate to have a very supporting wife who supports me in all I do, as I support her," he said.

The Imhoffs were the only husband and wife team to earn "Outstanding Fund Raiser" honors at Colorado's National Philanthropy Day celebration.

Regis University is close to Imhoff's heart and has been since his graduation. "I have a feeling of belonging," he said.

He has served in numerous capacities for his alma mater and chaired several campaigns to raise funds for the school.

In 1975, Imhoff was elected to the Regis University Board of Trustees, serving as its chair from 1982 to 1989. The University named him a Life Trustee in 1998.

"Once the Jesuits have you they never let you go," he joked affectionately.

More seriously, Imhoff said it was through Regis that he found his place in life. "I attribute my life work and career to that first opportunity," he said.

In addition, "The Jesuits have created a lot of opportunities for us," including meeting the pope, the President of the United States, and various Nobel Peace Prize Laureates, nine of whom have spoken at Regis University in the last six years.

"We were able to meet extraordinary people who made a difference in the world," he said.

The difference the Imhoffs have made in the world is not insignificant, either.

Walt Imhoff currently serves on 14 boards and throughout the years has served the community in a variety of ways. Among his favorite organizations are The Kempe Children's Foundation, which is dedicated to the prevention and treatment of child abuse; the Boy Scouts of America; St. Joseph's Hospital Foundation; Colorado Concern, a business watchdog group; the Two Percent Club, which encourages businesses to contribute 2 percent of their gross profit to philanthropic organizations; and Caring for Colorado, which was established by funding from the sale of Blue Cross, Blue Shield and is concerned with health care issues.

Georgia Imhoff, who trained as a registered nurse, is a busy philanthropist in her own right. In addition to her many charitable works, she recently launched a nonprofit-oriented Web site business with two partners. Blacktie-Denver.com serves as a clearinghouse of events and planning services for Denver's 3,000 nonprofit organizations and those who support them.

The Regis University Board of Trustees awarded both Imhoffs honorary doctorates in public service in 1991.

Imhoff also has served with various professional and business organizations, including serving as past president of the Bond Club of Denver and past president of the board of the Colorado Municipal Bond Dealers Association. Among the numerous awards he has received are being named Entrepreneur of the Year in 1995 by Ernst & Young, the Denver Business Journal and INC. magazine; and the Bill Daniels Award from the Denver Nuggets for his work with youth.

But perhaps the best sort of legacy available for a graduate of a Jesuit university that emphasizes helping others is one already in place for Imhoff. The Regis College Student Executive Board has established the "Walter F. Imhoff Service to Others Award," which goes to students who have distinguished themselves by serving others.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A version of this story appeared in the June 2001 edition of "Connections," the newsletter for the Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities, which highlighted Regis alumnus Walter Imhoff and other distinguished alumni from the 28 U.S. Jesuit colleges and universities.

Building Status

Regis ranked among top schools

For the seventh consecutive year, U.S. News & World Report has ranked Regis University a top school in the West. The magazine annually ranks universities and colleges throughout the United States in its guidebook "America's Best Colleges."

Regis University ranked No. 21 out of 126 schools among Western regional schools.

The University increased its score under academic reputation, one of six indicators of academic quality used in the formula to rank the schools. Regis earned a 3.1, out of a possible 5, up from 2.8 last year. Academic reputation is considered one of the most important categories.

"U.S. News' ranking formula gives greatest weight (25 percent) to reputation because the reputational survey allows the top academics we contact to account for intangibles such as faculty dedication to teaching," according to Robert J. Morse of U.S. News & World Report.

A school's reputation is determined by surveying presidents, provosts and deans of admission across the nation.

Other categories used in the ranking formula are graduation and retention rates, faculty resources, student selectivity, financial resources and alumni giving.

Regis scored well in a number of the categories, especially in faculty resources, which includes class size. Regis scored very high in percent of classes under 20, with 90 percent. Only one school in the West scored better than Regis in that category. And Regis was one of only five schools with no classes of 50 or more.

In addition, Regis improved its already good student/faculty ratio, with a 15:1 ratio compared to 16:1 a year ago.

The overall ranking system rests on a foundation of quantitative measures considered reliable indicators of academic quality by education experts and the magazine's nonpartisan view of what matters in education. The ranks of the top schools are published, while the others are grouped into tiers.

Additional ranking information can be found on the Web site www.usnews.com.

When John Moran was elected to chair the Regis University Board of Trustees in February 1976, a new era of trustee leadership was inaugurated. Moran was the first lay Board chair in the 100-plus years of the University.

Electing a non-Jesuit chair was a significant step in the University's outreach to the community at large. Two years earlier, in 1974, the first lay members of the Board had been elected. Today, two-thirds of the Regis University Board of Trustees are business and community leaders from across the nation. Jesuits comprise one-third of the Board.

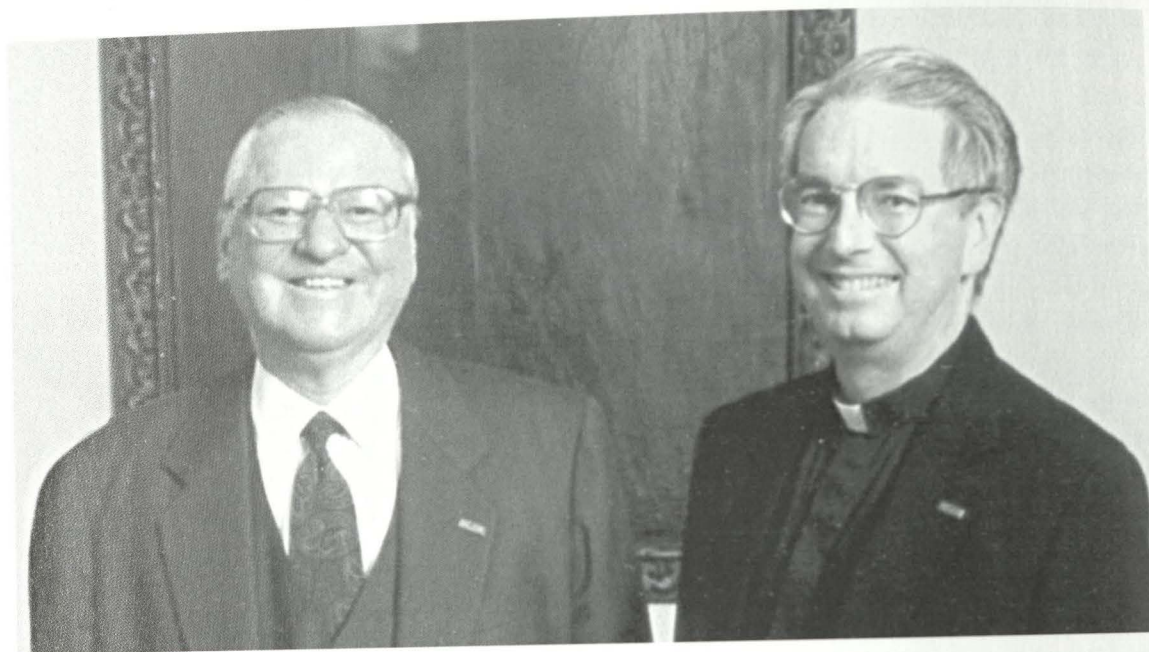

Martin T. Hart, chair of the Board, hosted a gathering in April 2001 of board chairs since the historic election of John Moran in 1976. Only Max Brooks, who died just prior to the gathering, was not in attendance.

"Reminiscing about the growth of Regis during the past quarter century made for a delightful evening," Hart said.

The decision to open the Board of Trustees to lay membership was made shortly after the arrival of Father David M. Clarke, S.J., as president of Regis in 1972. Father Clarke, along with Father Thomas J. Casey, S.J., who was interim president prior to Father Clarke's arrival, gathered a group of business leaders to advise the University, which had gone through difficult financial times.

"The decision to invite business and community leaders to join the Board of Trustees was an important step for Regis. We realized that building a strong, multi-talented Board was an essential step to ensure the long-term viability of the University," Father Clarke, now chancellor, recalls. "We have been blessed with committed, strong and caring Jesuit and lay trustees who have helped this University grow and prosper."

Dear Alumni and Friends:

As we reflect on academic year 2000-2001, a number of highlights come to mind, including the Forum on the Future, the continued growth in the number of students served, record annual giving, and a focused effort to enhance the University's image.

The Forum on the Future concluded its work in June 2000 by presenting its 151 recommendations to the Board of Trustees. The 215 members of the Forum examined the University's plans over an eight-month period and their recommendations are helping shape the decade ahead.

The number of learners continued to grow during the past year as the University served 13,547 students in 2000-2001, nearly 1,200 more students than the previous year's mark of 12,230. We're growing in all three schools. Our growth has been steady for the past several years -- a trend that is important to our continued success. But while that growth is important, we also value the personal attention Regis has always provided its students, and our student to teacher ratio remains at 14:1.

While our student body and our alumni base continue to grow, we also have seen growth in our fund-raising efforts. During the past year, $1.669 million was received through the Annual Fund. This critical area of unrestricted support, which helps us continue our 2½ decades of a balanced operating budget, showed an 18 percent increase over the previous year. Overall, more than $5.7 million was raised in restricted and unrestricted gifts.

Like our alumni and friends, our faculty and staff understand the importance of giving back to the University. An unprecedented 46 percent of the Regis University faculty and staff made a gift to the Annual Fund in the 2000-2001 fiscal year. This is the highest participation rate of faculty and staff giving at any of the Colorado institutions of higher education.

The individual successes of our students, faculty and staff also highlighted the year. Victoria McCabe, director of the Freshman Commitment Program, was honored by the Holocaust Awareness Institute for teaching lessons of the Holocaust, tolerance and understanding. Former Regis trustee and alumnus Edwin J. Feulner, Jr., '63, was named one of the 50 most powerful people in politics by George magazine. Junior Katee Doland garnered the University national attention by capturing one of the highest honors in the 2001 Miss USA Pageant. Lonnie Porter, men's basketball coach for 24 seasons, was inducted into the Colorado Sports Hall of Fame.

One of the most visible undertakings during the year was our effort to enhance the University's image. Supported by a recommendation of the Forum on the Future, we embarked on an image campaign featuring the University's first television advertisements. Through the pro-bono efforts of Regis alumnus Pocky Marranzino, Jr., '70, president of Karsh & Hagan Communications, Inc., several television commercials became reality, promoting the unique tagline "Learners Becoming Leaders."

Our image in the community and among our peers in the academic community was also enhanced by our continued recognition by U.S. News & World Report as a top school in the Western United States. For the seventh consecutive year, the U.S. News annual guide to the top universities and colleges in the nation ranked Regis University among the best.

We hope that as you review the Annual Report you will be proud of our accomplishments and even more motivated to participate in helping keep Regis University strong and vibrant.

Thank you for all you do for Regis University.

Father Shelton, S.J.

Professor's book receives national award

The Catholic Press Association has given a national first-place award to the latest book by Father Charles M. Shelton, S.J., associate psychology professor at Regis University. Achieving Moral Health: An Exercise Plan for Your Conscience, tied for first-place honors in the Pastoral Ministry category.

Shelton's book offers an in-depth look at the ways in which morality affects our lives. "Becoming, being and growing morally fit incorporates all we do," he writes. "Moral health depends not just upon the major decisions we make but also includes the ordinary, everyday decisions that occupy our work lives and relationships."

In giving the award, the Catholic Press Association wrote: "This book is a wonderful surprise. Shelton gives a definition and meaning to conscience that encompasses not only the whole person, but also the whole of humanity. Focusing on elements of relationships, empathy and psychic energy (to name a few topics), Shelton expands the notion of conscience to one that is more in line with gospel values. Shelton argues that conscience is not simply an individual experience. This is a reality that needs serious attention in our time, and Charles Shelton provides an excellent reflection."

The Catholic Press Association judging committee looks at all books published during the year when making its awards.

"I'm honored to receive this award," Shelton said. "It came totally out of the blue."

If readers come away with just one thing from the book, he hopes it will be that "we are moral beings and in light of that we have a responsibility to act ethically, both in our relationships and in work settings."

Shelton says he also hopes the book will help people grow morally and spiritually.

"Conscience is for everybody, of any religion or even a non-believer," he said. "Conscience can always grow; we can all grow morally."

Achieving Moral Health was published in fall 2000 by The Crossroad Publishing Co. and is widely available in bookstores and online.

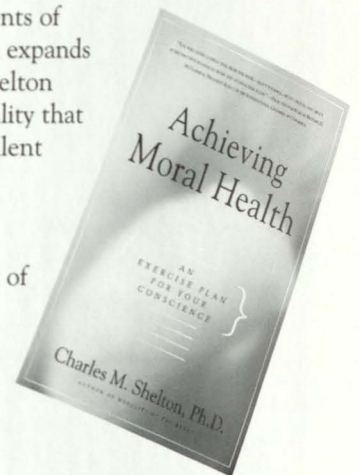

The book took a year to write and is based on Shelton's research as well as his experiences in his clinical psychology practice and study. The theme developed from his interest in ethical and moral development.

The dimensions of conscience as explored by Shelton are psychic energy, defenses, empathy, guilt, idealization, self-esteem and moral beliefs.

Throughout the book, Shelton poses questions and offers exercises to get the reader thinking about a variety of issues. Real-life situations bring it close to home.

Shelton discusses situations that involve the tug-of-war between loyalty and time for work and family; adolescents who shoplift; the difficulty of having to put a parent in a nursing home; a manager who must decide how to share limited resources with his employees; and many others.

Shelton has taught psychology at Regis for 12 years and has a private clinical psychology practice. He also is an internationally known consultant and lecturer who has written numerous articles and four other books, including Morality of the Heart and Adolescent Spirituality. He's currently at work on his sixth book, which examines the psychology of gratitude.

Record enrollment reached

Regis University has set a record in enrollment. The University has seen steady enrollment growth over the last six years, culminating this year in a total University enrollment of 13,547.

Last year's enrollment was 12,360, which means there was a significant increase of 1,187 students, or 8.7 percent.

The School for Professional Studies, which primarily serves adult learners in graduate and undergraduate programs, grew from 10,361 for academic year 1999-2000 to 11,424 for 2000-2001. Regis College, with primarily traditional-age students, grew from 1,204 to 1,286. The School for Health Care Professions, which includes nursing, physical therapy and health care administration programs, grew from 572 to 627. Ancillary programs included 210 students.

Since 1983-1984, the University's total cumulative percent change is 62.3. For academic year 1983-1984, there was a total of just 5,107 students enrolled.

Last year, the University awarded 1,891 degrees and 84 academic certificates.

A decade of educating nonprofit managers

Although most birthday parties do not involve helping others, it is not much of a surprise when a birthday party planned by the faculty and students of the Master of Nonprofit Management (MNM) program at Regis University benefits people in need.

When these people, dedicated to nonprofits, threw a party in June 2001 to cap off a celebration of the program's 10th anniversary, the festivities included a silent auction featuring handmade crafts from a poverty-stricken area in rural Guatemala.

Auction proceeds went to the hamlet of Scala, whose residents became associated with the Regis program through a Service Oriented Field Experience some MNM students took to the Central American country in April. The small village has many needs, including a new well, developing ways to sell their crafts, and improvements to their educational and medical systems.

The MNM program has come a long way in the decade since 1990. Paul Alexander, who has chaired the program in the School for Professional Studies since 1994, said it has grown from less than 50 students in 1990 to more than 200 in 2001.

It is one of just a handful of programs nationwide offering an advanced degree in nonprofit management. Regis has students from all over the United States, Europe, Asia and South America.

"The courses are very practically oriented for the nonprofit manager and leader," Alexander said.

About 85 percent of the students are actively engaged in nonprofit work, so networking with other nonprofit leaders is one of the advantages of the MNM program.

It also lets them "really focus on specific issues, like dealing with volunteers and government rules and regulations, in an environment where you can ask those questions not just of faculty but other students who have been there," Alexander said.

"Students have found it to be transformational," he added. "They question where they can best use their gifts for the benefit of society. It's exciting to watch."

One of the biggest changes over the last 10 years has been the way in which students can get their degrees. In addition to an eight-week accelerated classroom format, students can complete degrees online through the Distance Learning Program. A third option is an intensive one-week program offered during the summer. Students can mix and match how they take classes, Alexander said.

Regis offers community college scholarships

Regis University is offering a new scholarship program designed to help community college students transfer to the University. Beginning with the fall semester 2002, Regis will offer a $2,000 Community College Scholarship every year to a student from each of 15 community colleges in Colorado, seven in Wyoming and one in Nevada.

In addition, Regis is offering one Provost's Community College Scholarship for up to $7,500 each year to one community college student who is transferring to Regis University.

The scholarships are renewable for a second year.

To be eligible for the Community College Scholarship a student must transfer a minimum of 60 semester hours, 15 of which must be earned at the community college in which the student is enrolled; have earned a grade point average of 3.0 or higher; and meet the admissions requirements of the academic program the student wishes to pursue at Regis.

"A significant number of students transfer to Regis University from the community colleges," said Allan Service, provost and vice president for Academic Affairs at Regis. "We wanted to encourage even more students to consider Regis University by providing better information and making them aware that we are an option for them."

Service said he hoped the scholarships will demonstrate the University's continuing interest in welcoming community college students to Regis.

"The response from community college presidents has been very enthusiastic," Service said.

Engels plays professional baseball

Former Regis baseball player Jackson Engels, '01, has completed his first season in the Texas Rangers baseball organization, competing for the Gulf Coast Rangers (rookie level) in Port Charlotte, Florida.

Engels, a 6'3", 200-pound left-handed pitcher, compiled a 2-2 win-loss record to go along with a 2.22 earned run average (ERA) in his initial season of professional baseball. In 10 total appearances with the Gulf Coast Rangers, Engels logged 28.1 innings on the mound.

"It was a dream come true for me to be playing professional baseball this past summer," said Engels, who signed a free agent contract with the Rangers baseball organization in June 2001. "The level of competition is so high in the professional ranks, but it is still the same game. The mound is still 60 feet, six inches from the plate, and the bases are still 90 feet apart."

Engels, originally from Sheridan, Wyoming, has been asked by the Rangers to return for the 2002 campaign, and will report to Port Charlotte next February for Texas Rangers' spring training.

"When I signed last summer, my goal was to be asked back for spring training in 2002," said an enthusiastic Engels. "With that goal now realized, I am going to work hard this off-season to prepare myself, both physically and mentally, for another year in the Rangers' farm system."

Engels, who went 7-3 (70.1 innings) for Regis during the 2001 season, amassed a 3.66 cumulative GPA while earning bachelor's degrees in both mathematics and business during his academic career at Regis University.

Wanted: Original concert posters

Big-time rock 'n' roll lived at Regis University in decades past, and now this interesting bit of Regis history is being revived.

"There were a lot of headliners, a lot of concerts at Regis, especially during the 1960s and '70s," said David Law, assistant director of Student Activities. "It would be an interesting exhibit if we could dig up posters, frame them and hang them in the student pub."

The first poster that will hang on the walls of The Pub in the Student Center will be an original Queen poster, dated 1976. Regis was the first concert on the band's first American tour.

The Office of Student Life is asking for donations of posters, but will consider purchasing them. For more information, or if you have a poster to share, call Law at 303-458-4270.

Porter receives '7Everyday Hero Award'

Lonnie Porter, head men's basketball coach at Regis University, received a "7Everyday Hero Award" from KMGH 7NEWS. The award, presented weekly by the Denver station, is given to Coloradans who are making a difference. Anchor Mitch Jelniker was on campus June 26, 2001, to give Porter the award during a classroom session of The Lonnie Porter Summer Academy at Regis.

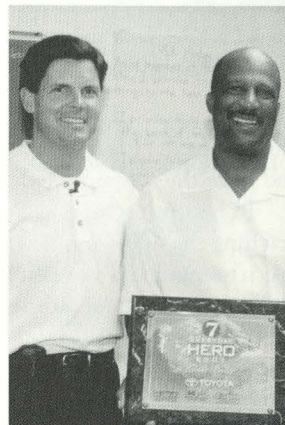

"This honor is very special," said Porter. "There has been so much support for the academy, and the '7Everyday Hero Award' is a tribute to the many who have contributed to the program's success."

The Lonnie Porter Summer Academy, which started in 1996, is an academic program that provides a college learning atmosphere for Denver-area at-risk youth, ages 8 to 18. The academy provides full scholarships to Regis for those who complete five years of the program. The initial class of the academy is slated to enroll at Regis next fall.

"It is a blessing to have been able to take this dream and run with it," Porter said. "Ultimately, our goal is to ensure the long-term endowment of the program so that these young adults may have the opportunity to get a college education."

Porter, entering his 25th year at the helm of the men's basketball team, also is committed to the academic success of his players. Of the 107 who have completed their eligibility at Regis during his tenure, 101 -- or 94 percent -- have earned undergraduate degrees.

Inducted into the Colorado Sports Hall of Fame earlier this year, Porter is the winningest collegiate men's basketball coach in Colorado history with a career win-loss record of 403-265.

Image campaign TV ad features SHCP

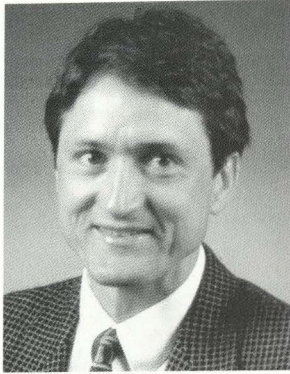

A new TV commercial featuring the School for Health Care Professions began airing this fall in the Denver Metro area.

The image-focused commercial is part of an effort by the Image Committee to enhance the University's image, better educate and promote the great things Regis is doing, and to make the University more visible in the public eye.

The commercial is the third highlighting Regis University. The first, which highlighted the entire University, aired in the fall of 2000. The second commercial, focusing on the School for Professional Studies, aired in March 2001.

The commercials, developed by Karsh & Hagan Communications, became a reality thanks to the efforts of Regis University alumnus Pocky Marranzino, Jr., '70, president of Karsh & Hagan Communications, Inc.

Volleyball coach Lavrisha hits 400th career victory

Frank Lavrisha, head volleyball coach at Regis University

Frank Lavrisha, head volleyball coach at Regis University, captured his 400th career victory on October 7, 2001, at the Regis Fieldhouse as the Rangers defeated Fort Lewis College 3 games to 0 in Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference action. Lavrisha's career record stands at 406-163, a .7154 winning percentage.

"I'm honored to be in the position I am,"

Lavrisha said. "I feel very fortunate to love what I do and have the support we do from the school."

In his 16th season at Regis, Lavrisha jokes that reaching the 400-win mark "makes me feel old. It doesn't seem like I've been here that long." Nevertheless, the milestone "makes me reflect a little bit, but I'll probably do that more at the end of the year because there's no time now," he added.

Lavrisha said it was nice to reach that 400-game milestone at home, where loyal fans, supportive parents and his family could celebrate with him.

Lavrisha has been head coach for 16 of the 24 years Regis has had a volleyball program. Prior to this season, he guided his teams to NCAA Division II post-season play 13 times and to the Elite Eight six times. His squads have been dominant in conference play, also, winning nine conference titles in 15 seasons and amassing a 196-31 record.

Credit goes to the academic atmosphere and support given to athletics that can be found at Regis, Lavrisha said. "It's a lot easier to recruit when you have a quality institution like this."

Lavrisha has earned individual honors as well. In 1988, he led the Rangers to a 38-7 record and was selected NCAA Division II National Coach of the Year by Volleyball Monthly. He was twice named the American Volleyball Coaches Association Northwest Region Coach of the Year and was named conference Coach of the Year six times.

Santo collection features work of graduates

The Regis University collection of santos -- Catholic folk art -- currently has a homegrown touch, thanks to the work by a trio of Regis graduates now on display.

The work of all three santeros -- carvers and painters of holy images -- will be on display and for sale in the Regis santo room on the third floor of Dayton Memorial Library through June 2002.

The work of Belarmino Esquibel, '60, primarily features paintings, while the work of Terry Ensenat Mulert, '85, primarily features carvings. José Raul Esquibel, '65, features both carvings and paintings. Santo statues are called bultos and panel paintings are called retablos.

Belarmino Esquibel taught in the Santa Fe, New Mexico, public schools until retiring in the late 1990s, and continues to live in Santa Fe. He paints with acrylics on pine panels and shows at the prestigious Spanish Market each year.

Mulert lives and works in Cordova, New Mexico, with his artist wife, Paula Castillo, and son. He works often in the Cordova style of unpainted, unstained wood.

José Esquibel earned a master's degree from Georgetown and worked for the U.S. government until the 1990s, then returned to his hometown of Littleton, Colorado, where he learned to carve and paint santos in the Colorado and New Mexico style.

The Regis University Collection of New Mexico and Colorado Santos is a 30-year effort by Father Thomas J. Steele, S.J., who entered into an arrangement that let Regis permanently display the santos. Steele, who now lives in Albuquerque, New Mexico, remains curator of the collection and periodically updates it so different santos are on display. He also continues to add to the collection.

Sacred art on display at O'Sullivan Arts Center

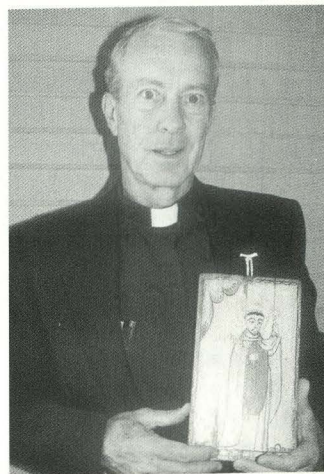

A group exhibition entitled "Santos: Sacred Art of Colorado" opened November 1, 2001, at the Regis University O'Sullivan Arts Center on the Lowell campus. Sixteen of the best santeros and santeras of Colorado are participating. The exhibition will run through December 13, 2001.

The exhibition opened on the Feast of All Saints Day, November 1, with a Mass celebrated by Bishop José H. Gomez of the Archdiocese of Denver.

In conjunction with the exhibition, Father Thomas J. Steele, S.J., curator of the Regis University santo collection, presented a lecture on santo art on November 8. José Esquibel, '65, a santero whose work is a part of the exhibition, also presented a lecture November 15.

A "market" is scheduled Saturday, December 8, for the artists.

The O'Sullivan Arts Center is open 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. Tuesdays; 11 a.m.-2 p.m. Wednesdays; 1-4 p.m. Fridays; and 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. and 6-9 p.m. Thursdays. It is located behind Main Hall on the Lowell campus of Regis University.
